INTRODUCTION

This volume continues where Volume I ended, that is with family number 08-00686 and continues through a part of the ninth generation.

A few more families are being located and as they are found a family number is being added following that child's name in the previous generation. These will be readily identifiable by the number as a child which precedes the head of the family. For example, family 08-01073, Mary Ann Fillmore's number as a child is 07-00080-06. From this it is known that the family number after her name in her parents' family record should be 08-01073 and can be written in Volume I, page 101, after her number 06, as a child at top of page. This is constantly being done as marriages are found for children who did not die young or for whom no death record shows them as died unmarried.

It will probably be observed that one Tingley with his large family made the move back to the United States because they were driven from their homes in Canada, according to the following transcript supplied by The Archives, Department of Canadian History, N. B. Museum and taken from the "First Settlers in Westmorland County, N. B."

Tingley Hill, Salisbury Parish, Westmorland County, N. B., is situated three and a half miles West of Petitcodiac Village. It was so called because of a settlement made by David Tingley and his four sons, early in the 1860's. The sons were: Harris, Harvey, William, and Curtis.

The land on which they settled was part of a large tract granted to George F. Smith, Lieutenant of the Royal Navy, but never occupied by him or others, until the Tingley family made their houses on the south side of the hill. The father probably justified his action by a belief that the grantee would never claim the land. A number of years after they established their homes, Hugh Davidson bought the saw mill property at Petitcodiac, and shortly afterward acquired this tract of land. He then took steps to dispossess the Tingleys, who, by that time, had made a good start on four farms and orchards and three dwellings. They were compelled to abandon their homes sometime between 1869 and 1872, when they returned to their former homes in the lower end of Albert County. At a later date (about 1872) they moved to the State of Maine. The south side of the hill has since remained in a wilderness state, but the name of Tingley Hill seems certain of becoming a permanent place name.

The view from this hill, looking towards the village of Petitcodiac is an exceptionally pretty one; the latter having the appearance of a cluster of houses, interspersed with trees, sitting in a large bowl.

Edward, another son of David Tingley, settled on the north side of the hill, in Graves Settlement. Many of his descendants may still be found in that area although, some of them have followed their cousins' example and moved to land south of the border or to the West Coast.

Thus the trend of moving south was on and others will be found to have returned to the land from whence their ancestors, Josiah and Jemima (Crabtree) Tingley had come. Also descendants of the Fillmores whose ancestors, John and Leah (Day) Fillmore, likewise had come from south of the border, were returning.

These are in the process of being rounded up and their records included in The Tingley Family Revised. Among them there are now many more names, such as Sterlings, Mittons, Crabtrees and Chandlers from the Fillmore branch; the Cahills, Stones, McCullys, Woods, Reades, and Phillips from the Tingleys, just to mention a few.

Again, in the words of Raymon Tingley - "I wish to thank all who have assisted in this work. While some have done more than others, still all have done what they could and so are deserving of equal thanks." I wish to thank you not only for the records but for the many letters of cheer and encouragement, which have spurred me on to gather more and more data so our new book will be ever so much more complete.

Anyone finding any mistakes in these records, or anyone who, at anytime, can supply data to make our family history more complete, is earnestly urged to contact the compiler, Mrs. Marian M. Frye, at her new address, R.F.D. #3, Box 168, Elkton, Va. 22827, U.S.A. Such information is greatly appreciated, as lines can still be carried forward in this - our revised family history. It is desired to make The Tingley Family Revised as complete and as accurate as possible.

07-00191-07 HENRY GROFF TINGLEY[8] (Joseph[7], Lemuel[6], Nathaniel[5], Ebenezer[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Ionia and Easton, Mich., born Mar. 1, 1850, at Millgrove, Erie Co., N. Y.; died Nov. 23, 1920, at Easton Twp., Ionia Co.[294], Mich., cancer of the stomach; married Oct. 17, 1877, by C. N. Pond, Minister, at Fulton Co., Ohio[295], Azelia P., daughter of James and Minerva (Hall) Shaw, of Chatham, Ohio, born Dec. 2, 1847, at Chatham, Ohio; died Feb. 18, 1916, carcinoma, aged 68y 2m 16d, at Easton Twp., Ionia Co., Mich.[294]; divorced[294]. Henry was a farmer.

Portrait and Biographical Album of Ionia and Montcalm Counties, Michigan (Pub. 1891) states:

"Henry G. Tingley is one of the enterprising, public-spirited and intelligent agriculturists of Ionia Co., and one who is meeting with decided success as a farmer and stock-raiser. He is located on section 12, Easton Twp. on a tract of land comprising seventy acres which has been improved in such a manner as is customary to men of zeal and interest in their calling. He was born in Erie Co., N. Y., Mar. 1, 1850, and has been doing for himself since he entered his teens. His parents, Joseph and Lydia (Groff) Tingley, were of English ancestry, and his father was born in New England, while his mother is a native of New Jersey. His father is deceased, but his mother lives in Ionia Co. She is now more than fourscore years old.

"The parental family consisted of ten children, eight of whom are living and scattered in several States. Henry came to Michigan when 13 years old and for some time lived in Jackson County, where he worked as a farm hand, receiving about $15 per month for his services. In his native State he obtained the rudiments of an education in the District School, and after coming West he spent two winters in study. From Jackson he went to Montcalm Co., where he worked in various capacities connected with the business of sawmilling. In 1876 he took up his abode in Ionia County, where he has remained, giving attention to agricultural work almost exclusively. He lived in Palo nearly three years and located on his present farm in the spring of 1879.

"The marriage rites between Mr. Tingley and Miss Azelia P. Shaw were solemnized Oct. 17, 1877, in Fulton Co., Ohio. The bride was born in Medina Co., Ohio, Dec. 2, 1847, and was a daughter of James and Minerva (Hall) Shaw. Her father was born in Massachusetts and her mother in Virginia.

The former is believed to have been of English descent, and the mother came of Scotch Irish race. Grandfather Hall was a soldier of the War of 1812. Mr. and Mrs. Tingley have five children, whose record is as follows: Harry A., born Sep. 4, 1878; Cora A., born Jan. 5, 1881; Fannie E., born May 15, 1882; Della M., born Jan. 16, 1887; Annie, born July 11, 1889.

"Mr. Tingley is Overseer of highways in district No. 2, and he has served as School Director. His vote is cast with the Democrats, and he believes his party is far superior to any other. As he is still a comparatively young man he is likely to rank among the most substantial men of the County ere many years. Mrs. Tingley is one who as wife, neighbor, and friend gains commendation, and both are popular in the society of their neighborhood."

07-00194-02 CAROLINE TINGLEY-BRYAN[8] (Reuben[7], Lemuel[6], Nathaniel[5], Ebenezer[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Tecumseh and Hillsdale, Mich., born May 2, 1833, at Erie Co., N. Y.; died Apr. 2, 1910, at Hillsdale, Mich., valvular disease of the heart, age 76y 10m 18d; married May 3, 1853, by W. E. Manley, Minister of the Gospel, at Lenawee Co., Mich., Ira Tillotson, son of Gideon and Malinda (Warner) Bryan, of Tecumseh, Mich., formerly of Waterbury, Conn., born July 16, 1825, at Ithaca, N. Y.; died Aug. 24, 1899, at home in Hillsdale, Mich., following a long illness. "For seven years he has been in poor health, for the past few months especially, requiring that tender attention that has been so generously bestowed on him by his loving companion of nearly half a century. His death came as no shock to those who have been watching hourly for the past two weeks for his passing.

"He moved to Michigan with his parents in 1832, settling in Tecumseh, and was one of eleven children. He was married to Miss Caroline Tingley in 1853, settling on the home where he died. All the older residents have known Mr. Bryan intimately, and the more they knew him the better they liked him. He was engaged in the jewelry business until his health failed, when he went south in company with his wife, in hopes the change would be beneficial. It did not prove so, however, and they returned about a year ago, where so many warm friends were ready to welcome them home. He leaves, besides his widow, one son, Bert, who lives in Jacksonville, Fla., and two grandsons, Reed and Stanley, who made their home with him." (from his Obituary).

Caroline came to Michigan with her parents at age 10 yrs. and they settled in Ridgeway. She was married there to Mr. Bryan at age 18 or 19 years and they came to Hillsdale to settle, pioneer residents, where they remained until death. Both are buried in Oak Grove Cemetery, Hillsdale[119].

07-00208-06 JOHN B. STEARNS[8] (John[7], Rhoda[6], Thomas[5], Timothy[4], Thomas[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Preston, Pa., born May 10, 1813, at Mount Pleasant, Pa.; died Jan. 18, 1877, aged 64, at Starrucca, Pa.; married first, Dec. 25, 1841, at [356], Maria, daughter of William and Hannah ( ) Coleman, of , born , at ; died July 17, 1846, at [356]; buried on Rufus Niles' farm, private cemetery, at Preston Corners, Pa.; married second, Nov. 1, 1854, at , Lucretia, daughter of Zenus and Wealthy ( ) Rouse, of Sullivan Co., N. Y., born Feb. 22, 1823, at Sullivan Co., N. Y.; died Sep. 6, 1887, at Jackson, Pa.[24]

Children by First Wife[24]

01 Julia Maria, b. Feb. 1, 1844, Preston, Pa.; d. Oct. 26, 1862; never married.
02 William Edgar, b. May 23, 1846; 09-01576.

Children by Second Wife[24]

03 Frederick Orville, b. Aug. 6, 1859; 09-01577.
04 Eva Helena, b. Sep. 30, 1862; 09-01578.

"John Jr. is designated on some records as John B. Stearns (he is so designated in the census record as given by his mother)[70]. His first wife, Maria, is buried in a little private cemetery on the old Rufus Niles (formerly Simpson) farm at Preston Corners. This cemetery is on top of the hill east of the barn. Maria's daughter, Julia, was later buried beside her. My grandparents, Rufus and Elizabeth Niles, are buried here, as well as my Simpson great grandparents. This cemetery is very small and has grown to brush and trees, which make it nearly impassable. It is an utter disgrace to families buried there - Niles, Stearns, Sherwood and others. The engraved slabs on Maria's and Julia's graves are broken and lying on the ground. They are covered with brush and leaves and the writing on them is barely legible.

"John married second Nov. 1, 1854, Lucretia Rouse, daughter of Zenus Rouse, of Sullivan County, N. Y. He was postmaster at Preston Post Office about 1848. At that time Preston Post Office was a little settlement on the old Pleasant Mount to Stockport Road, at what is known today as Preston Corners. It is southeast of Little York Cemetery near the old Rufus Niles farm.

"John was also a stage driver, but details concerning this are lacking. In 1853 John bought 48 acres from Jirah Kellogg. This was the first farm this side of the Rufus Niles farm towards Little York Cemetery. We do not know if John built the house on this farm or if it was there when he bought the farm. It is quite certain that the house standing there today is the same one. John and Lucretia sold this farm to James Davall in 1868. This is the same James Davall of whom my mother spoke so many times.

"In 1868 John moved to Gelatt. Here, in 1868, he bought 7 acres from a G. W. Bill for $1000. In 1870 he bought an adjoining 20 acres from Joel Lamb for $200. This is the farm on which he lived until his death. It is located in Jackson Twp., being the last farm in that township on the road from Thompson to Gelatt. Frederick and Eva Stearns, as administrators of the estate of John Stearns, sold the farm in 1887, after their mother's death, to Horace Barnes. Harvey Brown bought the farm in 1901 and it is owned today by Frank Belcher. John K. Stearns has told of visiting his grandfather there as a small boy. There was a millpond on the farm, which powered a sawmill and a woodworking factory. The 1872 Susquehanna County Atlas shows the pond and factory as well as the two houses owned by John Stearns. The one house is still standing, but the other has been gone for many years. The Browns also settled in this southeast corner of Jackson Township and Wanita Brown Whited still has a table which her mother bought from Lucretia Stearns.

"John died in 1877. He fell dead in Starrucca Depot, after buying his ticket and turning from the ticket window. It would be interesting to know what John was doing in Starrucca that day. His daughter, Eva, was still at home and his son, Fred, was a lad of 18 and probably still at home. The widow, Ellen Stearns, of his son, William Edgar, had remarried and was living at Preston Park or Island Pond. We would assume that he had been to Robert King's to visit his grandson, John, who had just celebrated his eighth birthday. Or perhaps his grandson had been visiting with him at Gelatt and he had brought him home.

"John, Lucretia, and John's sister, Lucinda Simpson, are buried in a cemetery on the same Thompson to Gelatt road. This cemetery is by the old Doctor Hugh Barnes farm. The plot is in the front northeast corner of the cemetery."[81] There is a nice monument and it reads:

07-00212-02 ELVIRA KENNEDY-BROWNSCOMBE[8] (Rhoda[7], Rhoda[6], Thomas[5], Timothy[4], Thomas[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Honesdale, Pa., born Sep. 6, 1809, at Mount Pleasant, Pa.; died July 28, 1891, at Honesdale, Pa.; married Jan. 16, 1849, at , William, son of and ( ) Brownscombe, of , born Oct. 31, 1793, at Devonshire, England; died Jan. 17, 1868, at Honesdale, Pa. William came to America in 1836[302].

Child[302]

01 Jennie Augusta, b. Dec. 10, 1850, near Honesdale;

Jennie Augusta 01 was born on a farm just outside Honesdale, Pa. She exhibited early talent in both art and writing. Bereft of her father at an early age, she worked her way to an education in art, and studied under some great masters abroad, and is noted for her authenticity of historical detail in Early Americana, Mediaeval, and Ancient Greek paintings. She worked in oils and water colors, and her paintings have been reproduced as etchings, engravings, photo-engravings or color prints for calendars. Her first oil painting was exhibited in 1876 and sold from the academy; in her later years some of her paintings brought the desired "four figures"; and at age eighty-three she was not without commission (contract) for her paintings. Several of her portraits are in the portrait collections of the Federal Circuit Court of New York; she did a series on "The Father of Our Country". Her "First Thanksgiving" hangs in Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, Mass., and several of her works are in the collection of the New York Historical Society. Jennie Brownscombe died at Bayside, Long Island, Aug. 5, 1936. Interment was in Glen Dyberry Cemetery in Honesdale, Pa., where a plaque on her monument reads "Monument was placed by Wayne Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution".[302]

The following is a copy of the obituary which was published at the time of her death:

"Jennie Augusta Brownscombe, internationally known painter, will be buried tomorrow amid the calm scenes of majestic solemnity at Honesdale which many times formed the background for her oils.

"The 86-year-old artist, whose canvasses are exhibited in several United States cities and in England, died yesterday at Bayside, Long Island.

"The funeral services will be held tonight from the home and her body will be brought to Honesdale for interment at 2 o'clock tomorrow.

"Miss Brownscombe, a descendant of Elder Brewster and other New England settlers on her mother's side, had been ill several months due to heart complications.

"Miss Brownscombe's great-grandfather on her maternal side was a Revolutionary soldier and her fondness and desire to reproduce paintings of her early forefathers was imbedded deeply in her mind in early womanhood.

"Many of these reproductions characterize and portray the very soul of America. One particular character which looms up headmost is "The Father of Our Country" --George Washington. "Washington's Courtship", "His Wedding Party", and others.

"In addition to these highly-prized oils, Miss Brownscombe has painted "The Landing of the Pilgrims", "The Departure of the Mayflower", and "The First American Thanksgiving".

"Born on a picturesque farm, which lies in the shadow of historic Irving Cliff, now Honesdale, Miss Brownscombe's ancestors came to America in 1630. Her desire to sketch and draw was developed when she was very young. A quiet trout brook, winding in and out among arched banks of her father's farm, beautiful forests, fields of waving grain and browsing cattle provided unlimited material for sketches for the talented young girl.

"Her father died while she was attending school and in order that she might start taking art lessons, she taught school for several terms. In 1868 she taught in the Honesdale Academy.

"Miss Brownscombe's first year of art study was in Cooper Institute, New York, where she won a medal. The next six years were spent as a student in the National Academy of Design and it was there that her work received merited recognition. Her first oil painting was exhibited in 1876 and sold from the academy.

"Miss Brownscombe had been in Europe four times, having spent the first year under Henry Mosler in France. Her second journey was for travel only and the third lasted two years and the fourth, three years, which were spent in Rome in Winter and in extensive continental travel in Summer."

For a more detailed description of Jennie Brownscombe and her art work see Encyclopedia of American Biography, New Series, pub. in 1934 by the American Historical Society, Inc., New York.

"The First Thanksgiving" has been reproduced, by permission of Bromley Co., Inc., from a postcard supplied by Fannie Tingley, and appears in the front of this volume.

Excerpts from an article concerning John Wallace Tiffany, clipped from the Topeka Daily Journal of July 5, 1920, and sent by Helen Lovett:

"He Gardens at Eighty-seven"

"J. Wallace Tiffany Maintains Patch Near Washburn. Veteran Has No Fear of the Hot Mid-summer Sun."

"The West as Mr. Tiffany Sees It"

"'How do you like the West?' J. Wallace Tiffany, for 83 years a resident of Pennsylvania, now of Topeka, was asked.

"'That is hardly a fair question after one has spent as much of his life in the East as I have,' he replied, 'But I feel this way about it -- if the commencement had been on the Pacific coast instead of at Plymouth Rock, the people of these United States would never have gone east of the Mississippi River, and the Atlantic coast would still be tenanted by Indians.'

"Eighty-seven years old and raising a garden that yields enough vegetables for three large families -- and that in a gulch which formerly produced only trees and underbrush. This is the remarkable story of J. Wallace Tiffany, pioneer Pennsylvanian, who is now making his home with his daughter, Mrs. C. E. Seely, at Nineteenth and MacVicar Streets, just across from Washburn campus.

"Although he has attained the age at which most men - those who reach it at all - are compelled, or at least are content, to spend their time in an easy chair, Mr. Tiffany plants and cultivates his almost-an-acre garden without any assistance and pays no attention to union hours. He rises early, is out in his garden when the sun is beating straight down, and the cool of the evening often finds him gathering up the odds and ends of which there are plenty in a garden. With all this, he still has time to read widely, and is well-informed on current topics.

"Mr. Tiffany came west four years ago in November, with his daughter and her husband. At that time, trees and unsightly shrubbery on the west side of Washburn campus shut off the beautiful part of the campus from the inhabitants of the Seely home, and it was to get rid of this eyesore that Mr. Tiffany began clearing off the space that now yields food for himself and family. He cut down trees, pulled weeds, grubbed out stumps and underbrush, piled and burned the rubbish. It was a big job, but he worked at it methodically, planting garden seeds in the ground from which he had pulled thistles .....

"Mr. Tiffany sold $40 worth of vegetables in 1919, over the amount used by his family for the table and for canning.

"His Hollyhock Patch"

"But it is Mr. Tiffany's hollyhock patch that attracts the wonder of the passersby. From the road they look beautiful, but it is not until one has had their history explained to him by the planter that their wonderful quality is realized.

.....Mr. Tiffany displayed them at the hollyhock exhibit at the Chamber of Commerce this week and excited much comment.

"Born Friday, the Thirteenth"

"Mr. Tiffany was born in Harford, Pennsylvania, Friday, September 13, 1833, but the Friday the thirteenth combination has not proved unlucky for him, as is attested by the condition of his health and his activity at eighty-seven.

"He is a member of the famous Tiffany family whose name has stood for perfection in jewelry for more than a generation.
"Mr. Tiffany is a Republican in politics and takes pride in the fact that he has missed only one presidential election in sixty-four years, that being the 1916 election, in which he was unable to vote because he had changed his place of residence to Kansas. Mr. Tiffany cast his first vote for John C. Fremont in 1856. He then voted for Lincoln and for every other presidential candidate since then with the exception of Hughes at the last campaign. He would have liked to vote for Hughes too, as the New Yorker's father was a personal friend of his, having visited him many times on his farm in Pennsylvania.....

"Mr. Tiffany is a distinguished looking old man, even in his gardener's garb. His hair and beard are white, there are wrinkles in his face, but he holds his 87 years well. C. E. Seely, Mr. Tiffany's son-in-law, works in the American Express office here."

07-00259-03 ANN E. TINGLEY-LOGEE[8] (Elisha[7], Timothy[6], Araunah[5], Timothy[4], Thomas[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Fall River, Mass., born July 22, 1828, at Blackstone, R. I.; died Jan. 8, 1905, at ; marriage intentions pub. Apr. 10, 1847, at Attleboro, Mass., married , 1847, at Attleboro, Mass.[12], Le Prelet M., son of Caleb and Sarah (Paine) Logee, of , born Feb. 5, 1826, at Burrillville, R. I.[24]; died , 1920, at . "Le Prelet was the son of a well-to-do farmer, a former deputy sheriff in his native town, and grandson of a French-Canadian Pioneer who came to Rhode Island long before the Revolution freed this country from England. Through the loss of his money by signing notes Mr. Loggee Sr., put Le Prelet and his brother into the cotton mills at Slatersville at the ages of 5 and 7 years, respectively. From that time until 1845 he worked in the mills in and about Woonsocket, when he went to Fall River as an overseer for the first time, and in 1860 took charge of the mills in Macon, Ga. He was made engineer of the ordnance department at headquarters, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"The story of this man's life reads like fiction. When one stops to consider that he went into a mill when he was 5 years old and worked steadily in one and another of them until 24 years ago this month, when he retired to enjoy the smiles that fortune denied him in his youth, one instinctively thinks, 'it's the survival of the fittest.' This accounts for his jovial good nature now. He is enjoying the relaxation which for 59 years was missing, and looks as though he would continue to do so until another generation rises to grapple with the serious problems of life.

"Volumes have been written of the men who have gained their education while following the plough on the farm, but here is a man who toddled about roaring machinery while a mere child from early morn till dewy eve', yet lived to tell the tale, gained a broad education, advanced to overseer and was a superintendent before the Civil War. He was quick in those days as in these to adopt new ideas, and refers with pride to the fact that he was the first man to set up an automatic mule in the social mill in Woonsocket.

"As this man sits and refers pleasantly to the incidents of his life it would be difficult to believe that he has passed the three score and ten which the average man considers a laudable accomplishment. His movements are quick, his step firm, his shoulders are slightly bent under the weight of years and hard work, but his face betrays no marks of the conflict of his earlier life. Well preserved teeth are still visible when he laughs, and it requires no apparent effort for him to read without the aid of glasses.

"In his 83rd year, he gained the distinction of being the only man who ever wanted to stand while a witness in the Superior Court, and it wasn't for a short hour or two that he stood under the gruelling cross-fire of opposing attorneys, either, it was for two whole days, and during that time he gave dates and reminiscences connected with his and his relatives' careers as fast as the attorneys could demand them."[3 8 4]

07-00287-02 RICHARD HOADLEY TINGLEY[8] (George[7], Hartford[6], Nathan[5], Timothy[4], Thomas[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of New York City, Pawtucket, R. I., Montclair, N. J., and Port Chester, N. Y., born July 4, 1856, at Windham, Conn.; died Dec. 13, 1935, at home, at Port Chester, N. Y.; married Apr. 13, 1887, at Providence, R. I., Bertha Franklin Tingley 08-00032-02, daughter of Cyrus Benjamin and Mary (Newell) Tingley, of N. Providence, R. I., born May 16, 1867, at Pawtucket, R. I.; died Jan. 20, 1949, at Port Chester, N. Y. "Richard Hoadley was a civil engineer and well-known writer, a graduate of Brown University, Ph.B. Class of 1876.

"He went to Montana soon after college and was a civil engineer working on the location of what became the Northern Pacific R.R. He started this position the year following General Custer's unpleasantness on the Little Big Horn. In later years he wrote about those early days for the Railroadman's Magazine.

"He was also city engineer for Providence, R. I., as was his father, George Curtis, who incidentally laid out the original Narraganset Race Track in Rhode Island. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

"He was active in various parts of this country and Canada, serving the West Shore Railroad and the Northern Pacific. He devoted himself to literary research in 1912 and also did special articles (including speeches) and became widely known for his contributions to newspapers and magazines, as follows: Trade Acceptances versus Open Account Credits, 1916; Transportation Economics in the Movement of Cotton, 1917. He was author of several books, one of which Banka Tin, was issued by the Government of the Dutch East Indies in 1922. He was contributor to Outlook, Independent, American Industries, India Rubber World, American Mutual Magazine, Magazine of Wall Street, Financial World, Forbes Magazine, Distribution and Warehousing Coast Investor, Compressed Air Magazine, American Mercury, Enigma, Science and Invention, Mentor, New Republic, St. Nicholas, Textile World, the leading New York newspapers, Boston Transcript, Providence Journal, Mc Clure Newspaper Syndicate, King Features Syndicate, International Syndicate and other press syndicates. General character of his writing was technical, financial, scientific and economic. His pen names were Ting Lee and Puzzle "Nom". He was a member of the following Clubs: National Puzzlers' League, Forty-Forty Club, Psi Upsilon, also American Society of Civil Engineers and was an Episcopalian.

"On December 19, 1935 the Forty-Forty Club of Port Chester, N. Y. RESOLVED, that the following tribute be spread upon our minutes and a copy sent to the family of our late member RICHARD H. TINGLEY:

"Modest and unassuming our fellow member RICHARD H. TINGLEY has passed to his Eternal rest. A member of this club since October 1928, "DICK TINGLEY" as we came to know him endeared himself to all of us by his friendly understanding of the problems and aspirations of men of a younger generation.

"A man of nation wide reputation he lived quietly and helpfully in our midst, ever interested in the welfare of the Forty-Forty Club working zealously on many duties assigned to him using his wide acquaintance to bring us speakers, who enlarged our understanding of public questions. He has left his indelible imprint upon the Club. In his death each of us has lost a sincere and inspiring friend and we wish to record our irreparable loss individually, our appreciation for his friendship and his service to our club and our deep sympathy for his family."

The following letter by Howard Bloomfield pays a tribute also to Mrs. Richard H. Tingley:

"I read with sorrow of the death of Mr. Tingley.

"For some years I was editor of Detective Fiction Weekly, and during that time Mr. Tingley began his narrative crossword puzzles and continued them until after I left. Every few months he came into my office. I liked to talk to him about trout fishing. We admired his happy fruitful career, his activity and interest in life.

"Behind his happiness I sensed, as well as knew from his remarks, a good woman indeed.

"I want to compliment you as a very fine wife to a very fine man, and express my deepest sympathy in your loss."

He also appeared in Who's Who in America, Vol. I.

02 Maurice (nmn), b. Dec. 15, 1891; 09-02323.

03 Pauline Evelyn, b. Aug. 6, 1898, Pawtucket, R. I.; d. Mar. 15, 1967, in the hospital at Westchester, progressive brain disease; buried in Swan Point Cemetery, Providence, R. I.

"Pauline Evelyn 03 was Head Librarian of the Port Chester Public Library for 21 years. She attended public school in Montclair, N. J., and took her Library Degree at Columbia University. She continued her studies in Summer Sessions at Cornell University, did special library work in New York and taught school in Samarkand, N. C., in a correctional school for girls for a couple of years.

"She moved to Port Chester in 1924 and joined the library staff in 1926 as Assistant Librarian. In 1939 she was appointed Head Librarian and served until her retirement in 1960.

"A history of the Library says of Miss Tingley's 34 years of service: "Port Chester Public Library's history and Pauline E. Tingley are almost synonymous. Until her retirement in 1960, she was known and loved personally by thousands of Port Chester residents."

"Miss Tingley was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church; a charter member of the Ruth Lyon Bush Chapter in Port Chester, Organizing Registrar in the D.A.R., and a member of the Westchester Historical Society. A memorial is to be placed in the library in Memory of Pauline E. Tingley."[304]

08-00022-02 HARTFORD BYRON TINGLEY[9] (Hartford[8], Lyman[7], Benjamin[6], Samuel[5], Samuel[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of North Providence, R. I., born July 28, 1841, at Seekonk, Mass.; died June 30, 1929, at Greenville, R. I.; married Mar. 9, 1866, at South Boston, Mass., by Rev. E. A. Manning, Caroline Augusta, daughter of William and ( ) Darrell, born May 7, 1849, at Boston, Mass.[272]; died Dec. 22, 1910, aged 61y 7m 15d, in her daughter Blanche's home, at Providence, R.I. Both are buried in the North End Cemetery, at North Providence, R. I.; he was a carriage painter and later was a huckster, built a boat and "followed the shore". He was a Private in Capt. J. H. Kendricks Co. I 11th Regt., R. I. Vol. Inf. in the Civil War. Enlisted Sep. 16, 1862, at Providence, R. I. and was discharged July 13, 1863, at Providence, R. I.

"Caroline Darrell was attending a young lady's finishing school in Boston --- so the story goes --- when she met Hartford Byron Tingley and eloped from the school to marry him. It is said that her family disowned her. She was not entirely happy with Hartford Byron as he was a 'dandy' and apparently not sufficiently interested in 'home life'. She disappeared and her children were scattered among the aunts and uncles on the paternal side. Caroline Darrell was found some years later taking care of children in a doctor's family, as companion-nurse -- apparently she was employed.

"It is said that she was taken from that happy group and went to live with Blanche (Lillian Blanche), her own third child, who had married Albert Dronsfield. This is where Caroline died at the age of 61 years."

Children

01	Arthur Hammond,	b. May 29, 1866; d. Oct. 14, 1938[364].
02	Hartford Forrest,	b. Feb. 25, 1868; 10-00066.
03	Lillian Blanche,	b. Jan. 20, 1870; 10-00067.

05	Ruth Adelaide,	b. Sep. 18, 1877; 10-00069.
06	Lemira Grace,	b. Dec. 8, 1880, N. Providence; d. June 29, 1881.

Arthur Hammond left home as a boy, was later found working as a wood-cutter, in Maine. The following article tells of his death: "Arthur Tingley 72 years old of Bowdoin was fatally injured at 6:30 o'clock tonight (Oct. 14, 1938) when struck by an automobile driven by Carroll Decker, 21 of Gardner while walking on the Brunswick-Gardner highway. Removed to Brunswick hospital, he died there 15 minutes later. Dr. C. W. P. Foss, attending physician said internal injuries were the cause of death. The man also had a fractured right leg and multiple abrasions and contusions. The accident occurred near the Bowdoin-Topsham town line. Decker told State Officers Harold Mitchell and Charles F. Marks that Tingley suddenly appeared in front of him and he had no opportunity to avoid hitting him. He admitted having had a drink of beer, officers said.

"Mitchell said tonight he did not know whether action would be taken against Decker. In the machine were the car's owner, Guy F. Delaney and his wife, 24 Plummer St., Gardner. Decker lives at 95 Sumner St., Gardner. They were returning as was Tingley from Topsham Fair. Tingley had lived alone the past 20 years in a camp located on the farm of Linwood Skelton at Bowdoin. It is understood he had distant relatives living in Providence, R. I."

Helen Williamson wrote: "Mother and Aunt Blanche went up to Skelton's who were very helpful. Giving us many things Uncle Arthur had carved out of wood, peach stones and there were also the baskets made with tree branches, we so often see hanging with plants in them."

"Ruth Adelaide was known by her friends as Ruth Ann, but official records show it as Ruth Adelaide, although her father has it recorded in his papers as Ruth Ann".[364]

"Henry C. Dexter was widely known in Rhode Island mill circles. He was in his 66th year; suffered from a cerebral hemorrhage in Jan., 1932. For a time he rallied, but in spite of all medical aid and indomitable courage, his health continued to fail gradually. (d. Apr. 9, 1935)

"On his paternal side, he was descended from Richard Warren, a signer of the compact of the Pilgrims of Plymouth, while on his maternal side, he traced his ancestry to Benjamin Tingley, an officer in the Revolutionary War. He was the son of a veteran, his father having served in the Twelfth Rhode Island Regiment in the Civil War.

"He received his education in the public schools of his native town and later was graduated from the Bryant and Stratton Business College of Providence, where he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Business Administration in

"His business career began when he entered the office of the Pawtucket Manufacturing Co. Leaving this concern, he became paymaster and later agent of the Greene and Daniels Manufacturing Co., of Central Falls. After many years of service, he became business representative of the Fales and Jenks Machine Co., a position he held until the firm sold its interest to the Whitins Machine Co. For a number of years he was president of the Warren Lace Works.

"He was interested in local, State and National affairs. He served as a member and chairman of the Central Falls School Committee for many years and had been secretary of the Seekonk River Commission, a former president of the To Kalon Club of Pawtucket, lieutenant-paymaster of the Rhode Island Militia, a member of Maj. George Tingley's staff, a member of Luacompang Lodge and Ninigret Lodge, a member of the Squantum Club, and honorary member of the Fortnightly Club, president of the Southern New England Textile Association, an honorary member of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, a member of the British Empire Club and the Turks Head Club.

"Through his efforts, the old Slater Cotton Mill at Pawtucket, where Samuel Slater started the first cotton manufacturing in America, was purchased and restored as a museum, dedicated to the cotton industry, and the Slater Mill Association formed with Mr. Dexter as president.

"He had served as president of the Rhode Island Society, Sons of the American Revolution, governor of the General Society of Colonial Wars; governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants of the State of Rhode Island; assistant general from Rhode Island to the National Society of Mayflower Descendants; deputy governor of the Founders and Patriots Society of America; a former member of the Society of the Wars of 1812; a member of the Rhode Island Historical Society and a member of the National Security League. He was a 32nd Degree Mason, a past master of Union Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M.; a past high priest of Royal Arch Chapter No. 4; a member of Pawtucket Council, No. 2; a past commander of Holy Sepulchre Commandery, Knights Templar; a past potentate of Palestine Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; and a member of the Rhode Island Consistory.

"In addition to being a past grand master of Masons in Rhode Island, he was formerly right eminent sir grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, Knights Templar, and past president of the Past Commanders Association, and a member of the Masonic Veterans' Association".[391] (paper was dated Apr. 14, 1935)

"As the result of a throat infection, with which he had been ill only three days, Judge Roscoe M. Dexter, 66, of Central Falls, veteran Blackstone Valley attorney, died early yesterday morning in Memorial Hospital, Pawtucket.

"He had served as judge of probate in Central Falls, clerk of Eleventh District Court and then as judge of that tribunal, during the 40 years he had practiced law in the Blackstone Valley area. Interested in local history and in music, he was co-author of A History of the Lower Blackstone River Valley, and was an honorary member of the University Glee Club.

"His father, the late Theodore F. Dexter, one time member of the Rhode Island General Assembly and a Central Falls contractor, was a Civil War veteran and Judge Dexter was one of the few surviving members of Hiscox Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, to participate actively in the traditional G. A. R. Memorial Day ceremonies in Central Falls.

"He was born in Central Falls, then a part of the town of Lincoln, Nov. 3, 1877. His mother was the late Harriet E. Dexter. He was graduated from Central Falls high school in 1896 and from Brown University in 1900. He attended Harvard Law School and then read law in the office of the late James L. Jenks in Pawtucket.

"A member of the Central Falls Republican City Committee for many years, he served as City Committee chairman for several years and also as president of the old Lincoln Republican Club of Central Falls. He served as clerk of Eleventh District Court when the late Judge Ambrose Choquette was justice and upon his retirement was appointed to succeed him. He served as justice until 1935.

"He was a member of Union Lodge, F. and A. M., Pawtucket Royal Arch Chapter, Pawtucket Council, R. & S. M.; Holy Sepulchre Commandery, Knights Templar and Palestine Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S., all Masonic organizations.

"He was a member and former president of the Pawtucket Bar Association, secretary of the Old Slater Mill Association, and a member of the Rhode Island Bar Association, University Club, British Empire Club, Sons of the American Revolution, Founders and Patriots of America, Society of Mayflowers Descendants and Rhode Island Historical Society.

"An organizer of the Central Falls High School Alumni Association, he served as first president of this organization. He was chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Adams Memorial Library, Central Falls; secretary of the Memorial Hospital Corporation, Pawtucket and a member of the Cumberland Cemetery Corporation.

"During World War I he served as secretary of the Central Falls Selective Service Board and during the current war he was one of the lawyers attached to the staff of the Selective Service Board. He served as district chairman of the Lower Blackstone River Valley Tercentenary Committee.

"Rev. A. Elwyn Tingley, Ph. D., pastor of Embury Methodist Church, conducted the funeral service and burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Pawtucket, R. I."[391] (dated Jan. 3, 1944)

Theodore Everett was an instructor in Hope Street High School; was elected to Mayflower Group in April of 1946[364].

Their sister Ruth was the only member of this family who married.

"One week before Tylman's death he played an important role in the Pageant marking the Hundredth Anniversary of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was also to have occupied a place of honor at the Anniversary Service of Cambrian Lodge, I.O.O.F., being the oldest member of the Lodge, with a service record of 62 years.

"He began an apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade when 17 years of age. He advanced rapidly and shortly after began to furnish lumber to the D & H Co. From that he turned to the contracting business and also the lumber and milling business. He was one of the most successful contractors in Northeastern Pennsylvania and built more than 350 public, business, and residential structures in Carbondale.

"Although he took an active interest in politics, he also exercised an independent vote. On one occasion he ran for Mayor on the Prohibition ticket and lost by a small margin."[216]

04 Roy Blake, b. Oct. 14, 1882; 10-01503.

Forest Stanley Adams drowned in the tail-race of the old Dixon water-powered flour mill where his father, Blake, temporarily lived and worked, at Longmont, Colo.

Waymart, Pa., where Helen was born, raised, and married, is a mountainous district. It was the site of an early-day tollgate house and tavern known to that generation as the "haunted house" because of strange, real or imagined, happenings. The structure later burned under mysterious circumstances, but not before it had been the source of innumerable family stories, the reputed scene of intrigues, murders, robberies--even the complete disappearance, at times, of guests traveling by wagon-train with all their equippage including horses and wagons, leaving no clues to be found. Blake, in addition to being carpenter, farmer, bee-keeper, clock-and-watch repairman, and--in his younger days--a fiddler for country dances, was a story teller; and, when he and Helen were visited in Colorado by relatives from Pennsylvania, the pull of "ghost" stories on hearts young and old at evening gatherings was made the more irresistible by the magic influence of good company with fiddle music, apples, cider, buttered pop-corn and hot parched sweet corn, and, sometimes, hot fresh "fried-cakes". Blake's frequent changes in occupation were due, in part, to the limitation he felt in an arm due to the Rebel musket ball lodged there and which the doctors of the Civil War advised should not be removed, and which he carried to his grave. But, at that, with his frugality he accumulated property and was able to leave his children a minor inheritance.

His military service had begun 8 Aug. 1862 when he enlisted in Co. F, 141st Pennsylvania Regulars. With others, he was taken prisoner four months later. He and a friend, a Private Aldrich, escaped by tunnel. Four others were shot down in an attempt to follow. Blake returned to his company and was honorably discharged 8 July 1865.

Blake's father, Joshua Knight Adams, came to Harford, Pennsylvania, in 1811 and, on March 7, 1814 married Peddy Wilmarth Tiffany, youngest daughter of Hosea Tiffany who came with Robert Follett and his family as the first white settlers there. Joshua was a cabinet maker and undertaker. He lost his first shop by fire and built a second shop on his father-in-law's homestead. He was a member there of the North Star Masonic Lodge No. 119 whose charter was originally issued in England and later transferred to the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Joshua taught school at Harford Township Seminary from 1800 to 1820.

08-00238-01 SOPHINA CRABTREE-DORMAN[9] (Charlotte[8], John[7], Jemima[6], Josiah[5], Samuel[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Richmond, Kansas, came to Mound City, Kansas 1856, then to Franklin Co., Kansas in 1868, born Jan. 5, 1842 at Saint John, N. B. (formerly was Nova Scotia); died Dec. 29, 1932 at Richmond, Kansas, natural causes; married Apr. 12, 1861, by Rev. Veach, Baptist Minister, at Mound City, Kansas, Capt. William, son of George and Belle (Horner) Dorman, of Lockport, N. Y., formerly of Ireland, having come about 1850 (grandson of Isaac and Agnes (Doogan) Dorman), born Sep. 6, 1835 at Newry, Donegal, Donegal Twp., Armaugh Co., Ireland; died Apr. 10, 1917, natural causes, at Richmond, Kansas; both are buried in Richmond Cemetery at Richmond, Kansas. He was apprenticed in New York to a wagon master for 3 years. He was a school teacher, cabinet maker and wagon maker; served in the Civil War, having enlisted in the Union Army, Co. D 5th Cav. Kansas.

"Sophina's parents moved to Chicago when she was but 2 yrs. of age. She lived in the State of Illinois until 1858 at which time she and her sister Hannah had come to Lawrence and Topeka, Kansas in 1858 or 1859 with two of their Uncles, David and Benjamin, in a covered wagon drawn by a team of oxen. They lived in Lawrence and Topeka and Shawnee Mission where she worked for her uncle and taught the Indian girls in a Baptist Mission school among the Pottawatomis. In the meantime their mother and stepfather, Rufus Smith came to Kansas and settled on land near Mound City. The two girls joined them there later on, where she met William Dorman. He and Sophina Crabtree were married near Mound City Apr. 12, 1861. Soon after, he joined the army and when he found the war would continue for some time, he sent Sophina to Lockport, N. Y. to stay with his relatives.

"In early winter her husband rode after night to Mound City and put her in charge of a friend to get her across the river to take the train to his parents in Lockport, N. Y. She finally got someone to take her and her trunk across the river in a row boat where she caught the last train out of Westport Landing, now Kansas City, before the rebels pulled up the ties and rails. In St. Joe, Mo., where she changed trains she slipped and fell, injuring herself. When she got to Chicago, she got off the train and went to the home of her grandparents, John and Sarah (Reed) Fillmore, where her twin babies were born prematurely, Dec. 16, 1861, a boy weighing 2 1/2 lbs. and a girl weighing 3 lbs. They survived, being wrapped in cotton bats packed in a basket on warm bricks. They grew to manhood and womanhood. Their names were Clarence George (who was killed in Montana, while goldhunting) and Clara Belle Dorman, named for their father's parents, George and Belle Horner Dorman of Lockport, N. Y.

"Sophina, with her babies later went to his parents' home. The twins were 3 1/2 years old before they saw their father. In 1868, they settled in the Taply neighborhood, Franklin Co., Kansas where Mr. Dorman taught school. He taught for a number of years, the twins having started their 1st year to him. Also, when Clara Belle (a twin) was 17 or 18, she taught one school and he was teaching at another. Grandma Dorman said that they both went together in a cart, dropping one off at the first school and the other going on to the next one.

"Mr. Dorman was wounded (not too seriously) in the chest and had a finger shot off during the war. He was a very good violin player. Later, another daughter, Eliza Jane Dorman was born. She married Eb Burlingham and resides in Richmond, Kansas, and raised their family of six children, William, Hattie, Esther, Marjory, Ina and Charlie.

"Mr. George C. Dorman (Clara Belle's twin) and a partner had gone to the Missoula Mts. in Montana, to hunt gold one winter and was found dead Mar. 20, 1910. He had been married to Mary Reno of Richmond and had a little daughter and was divorced.

"Clara Belle Dorman married Daniel Marion Clark, Mar. 7, 1889. They had four children. Earlier, she, her father and her brother George had gone west and all had filed on homesteads in Gove Co., Kansas. Clara Belle Dorman was the only one who stayed and worked or proved it out. After she proved her land, she went back to Richmond and met and married Mr. Clark."

Copy of letter written by David H. Fillmore to a niece --

"Dear niece Sarafina Dorman, Richmond, Kansas.

"Dear Old Girl: I was considerably amused when I read your letter and perceived the fact that you took your own dear old Grandfather and mother Fillmore for your Uncle David and Aunt Anna, why God bless you, we are but young people yet, and quite as friskey as fifty years ago. I ran the footrace three weeks ago at Clearlake, Iowa, of 400 feet against six young men, all of them ball and band players and beat them all ten and fifteen feet, and thus took the first prize. Why no stranger takes me to be over 50 and of energy they say 45 years. Thus God has been good to me in helping me to use good horse sense in taking care of the physical man.

"I am today just as much of an athlete as when I knocked the tar out of that fellow that insulted you, and would do the same thing again under like circumstances, providing you appealed to me for aid as you did then. Now think of me, not as an old man but as the same Uncle David of long ago, full of fun and sunshine and love of the fair sex, and as willing to do them a good turn if I found them in distress, as when I thrashed the other fellow. I have written up a history of that trip and I have told a good many of the funny things that occurred. You and poor dear Hannah occupy a conspicuous place in my history, and I embellish it with a great many facts as well as fiction, and I finally land you and Capt. Dorman after the war in Brooklyn, N. Y., with your three children amid the clover of peace and plenty. Hannah finally marries a student of the Baptist Mission to the Potawatomys by the name of Chandler. He finally quits the ministry and becomes an ideal farmer and settles near the Mareydezene River, Kansas, where they are now to be found with a charming family of twelve children to gladden and bless their lives in their declining years, the title of the story is, The two Crabtree Sisters who went west in 1859 as missionarys and teachers to the Potawatomy Indians and what became of them, and the second chapter is the story of the Crabtree sisters continued. And is just chuck full of comedy and tragedy and fun. But I have told you enuf about my history, I will say that I was just delighted to hear from you, and hope sometime to see you face to face." (Some of that history will also be given below.)

"Your Uncle William Fillmore is not expected to live much longer. He is with his daughter Cora Kimball at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and so is Isabell his wife. Benjamin Fillmore is at Blunt, S. D., and is well and doing well, got a letter from him yesterday, Cynthia's was with me a fortnight ago and was well, that picture of your grandparents was taken when mother was 83 years, and father 91 years of age. Mother lived until she was 85 and father until he was 95. William is now 91 years of age but awful low in health, I hope this will find you all well with lots of love, I am your Uncle.

"Dear old girl in so far as the sad things of life goes, we have all had them, and sometimes it has seemed more than we could bear. But my experience of life leads me to advise you to look up to Him who said come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me for my yoke is easy and my burden is light and ye shall find rest for your soul. The things of this life is perfectly inexplissable to me, and I am waiting for the next to have them unfolded. D. H. F.

"P.S. I shall expect an apology from you for taking your grandparents for your Uncle Dave and Aunt Anna." (This was in answer to a letter from her telling of her son's death in the wilds of Montana, while prospecting for gold, in the winter of 1910.)[431]

The Richmond Enterprise Newspaper gave the following account:

"William Dorman was born in County Armaugh, town of Newry, Ireland, where he spent the first 15 yrs. of his life. He then came to America and spent awhile at work in canal building at Lockport, N. Y. In the year 1860, he came to Kansas, living for a season at a place called Monet near Mound City, in Linn Co. The year he married the call to arms in defense of the Union was ringing through the north, and Mr. Dorman promptly enlisted in Co. D. of the 5th Kansas Cavalry, his commanding officer being O. E. Morse. He continued in the service for more than 3 years, passing safely all the dangers and hardships of army life and receiving an honorable discharge, he returned to his home and family. In the fall of 1868, he came to the farm in Tapley neighborhood, Franklin Co., and there continued until he and his wife were permitted to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary, Apr. 12, 1911, and then they came to Richmond where they have spent the last six years quietly and peaceful in our midst.

"Three children were born in the family. The son George died a few years ago in the Bitter Root Mountains of Idaho-Montana, and their daughters, Mrs. D. M. Clark of Gove Co., Kansas and Mrs. Eb Burlingham of Richmond, Kansas. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Lytle at the Presbyterian Church Apr. 12th, 1917." On Feb. 4, 1913, at the age of 84 yrs., Mrs. Dorman had made her profession of faith and united with United Presbyterian church, she remained a member until her death."[201]

Extracts from Life and Adventures of David H. Fillmore written by himself in his 64th year, at Dows, Iowa, in the year 1908.

The provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia originally belonged to France, and was ceded to the English in 1713, and first settled by the British colonists in 1764. In 1784 New Brunswick was separated from Nova Scotia and organized into an independent colony, and joined the Dominion of Canada in 1867. The climate of New Brunswick is remarkably healthful and the season called the Indian Summer is particularly agreeable. New Brunswick also contains a rich and extensive wheat producing district, but the inhabitants divide their time between farming, fishing, and ship building. It was in this country that my grandfather, John Fillmore, emigrated with his young wife immediately after the Revolutionary War, having secured about one thousand acres of fine grazing, farming, timber, and marsh lands, from the Crown of England. From which, after dyking the marsh land, they raised great crops of timothy hay, and thus he became a farmer of considerable thrift. It was on this farm that my grandfather raised nine children, seven boys and two girls. My father was born on this farm in 1793 and emigrated to Chicago, Ill., in 1845, and in 1846 he moved from Chicago into Virgil, Kane County, Ill., where they resided until mother's decease in 1885, in her 85th year. Both of them were devoted followers of the Christ in their way, that is as they understood the Scriptures. They were early in life baptized by immersion into the Kingdom of God on earth, and made their home with Baptist people to worship God publicly. And I can say for myself, in regard to my parents, "God bless their memory", for their virtues far overshadowed their faults. Father and grandfather both held commissions under the crown of England, and served their country faithfully in behalf of the provinces against the states, and served in the command of General Brock. Grandfather a Major, and father as Captain in the War of 1812, being discharged from the army in 1814.

The true object of this history is first, to my beloved family, in giving in detail the acts and doings of my own life, and therefore it is not to give a complete history of the Fillmore family, more than a genealogy from Captain John Fillmore of Norwich, and those of the family and others who may be more intimately associated with my life. Father, therefore, at the close of the War of 1812, gathered together twenty-five young men who had served with him in the army, and they emigrated up the Miramichi River 180 miles, near Chatham, N. B. There he secured himself a 240 acre farm along the banks of the river, on which he moved with his young wife in the year 1818, and on which was born to them ten children--Charlotte, William, John, Jane, Mima, Benjamin, Rebecca, David H., Cynthia, and Zaccheus; and all save four of us have passed to that land from which no traveller returns. Those living are, William, now in his eighty-eighth year, and exceedingly smart for his age, and also a very interesting old gentleman, with long white hair and whiskers, the very image of his father and promising fair to see one hundred years; and Isabelle, his wife, who was a Miss Tweedy, of New Brunswick, and equally promising for a long life, and now in her eighty-second year. They have raised a model family of ten children, and at the present writing, August 21, 1908, they are celebrating the sixtieth Anniversary of their happy wedded life. And I may say in this history that the occasion was unusual in more ways than one. First, from the fact that the sixtieth anniversary of married life is unusual and not very often reached to celebrate. And secondly, because all of their ten children were alive, and on this occasion were there with their wives and husbands to give tone to this celebration in honor of their aged parents. Thirteen of their thirty grandchildren, and two of their six great-grandchildren were also present. All these and a goodly number of their Fillmore kindred with their wives, graced this happy occasion, and made up a dinner party of over forty of our branch of Captain John Fillmore's descendants.

This beautiful anniversary celebration took place at their daughter, Cora Kimball's, commodious and charmingly arranged home at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Golden Glow was used in great abundance to decorate the parlors and halls of this charming home on this delightful occasion. Mr. & Mrs. William Fillmore received and greeted their children, kindred, and friends throughout the day with hearts apparently overflowing with joy. And encomiums of praise "Was bestowed upon Mrs. Cora Kimball, and Miss Jennie Fillmore, their daughter" and granddaughter, who presided and who completed all the arrangements of this happy celebration. Mr. Fillmore's two brothers were there, Mr. B. J. Fillmore of Blunt, South Dakota, and Mr. D. H. Fillmore, from Dows, Iowa, and his son Floyd D. Fillmore and wife, Eva, also from Dows, were present. An old friend of the Fillmores, Rev. Fred Hall of Centralia, Kansas, came all the way with his little boy to help celebrate this anniversary, and who did some wonderful gifted praying for this bunch of Fillmores, which will pretty near insure all our entrance through the gate, into the Celestial City, when we come up before St. Peter, although there was not a bummer in the family to be alarmed over. This gentleman from Kansas and the Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Lockwood and Judge and Mrs. Milo Smith of Cedar Rapids were present, the only guests outside the family invited.

Dinner was served to the entire company at half past twelve, Mr. & Mrs. Fillmore and their ten children, were seated at a long table in one of their spacious and beautifully decorated parlors, and the others, at small tables throughout the house. The ten children at the table with Mr. & Mrs. Fillmore were John R. Fillmore of Marion, Iowa, a retired farmer; Charles W. Fillmore of Winnipeg, Manitoba, President of the Winnipeg Oil Company; Horace F. Fillmore, Secretary and Treasurer, of the Winnipeg Casket Company; Dr. W. A. Fillmore of Redfield, South Dakota; Mrs. Sarah E. Hopkins of Independence, Iowa; Mrs. Laura J. Wilt of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mrs. Alma Dickson of Maxwell, Iowa; Mrs. Cora B. Kimball of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mrs. Mary L. Scott of Colman, South Dak.; Miss Olive M. Fillmore of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, which comprises the entire family, and a more beautiful sight I know I never witnessed in my life. The dinner of numerous courses, was served by six granddaughters, all of them dressed in white; Misses Jennie Fillmore, Emma Hopkins, Vera Wilt, Dena Wilt, Amber Hopkins, and Erma Hopkins.

The reunion and celebration comprised three ministers in the family, the Rev. Clayhourn, a grandson-in-law, the Rev. Scott, husband of Mildred, their daughter, the Rev. F. D. Fillmore, son of D. H. Fillmore, of Dows, Iowa, and the invited Brother, the Rev. Fred Hall from Centralia, Kansas. Mr. & Mrs. Fillmore are both natives of New Brunswick, but their children were all born in Illinois. Mr. William Fillmore was born in 1820, and Mrs. Fillmore, his wife, in 1828. They were married August 21st sixty years ago, in New Brunswick. They came directly to Illinois where Mr. Fillmore became a shingle manufacturer for a number of years at St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill., and afterwards going onto a farm of his own near Lily Lake in Kane County, where they resided fourteen years, finally selling out and coming to Walker, Linn County, Iowa, where they raised and educated their delightful family. C. W. Fillmore, Alma Fillmore, Frank H. Fillmore, and William A. Fillmore all becoming teachers in the schools, which occupation they followed for years, Frank H. becoming County Superintendent which he held for eight years, making his home at Spencer, Iowa. Too much could not be said in praise of this estimable family, as they have all made good citizens, "and up to the present writing, done fairly well," which speaks well for their parents. And this is the simple outline of the lives of two people who were suitably mated, and whose long years of wedded life have brought to them peace, prosperity, and happiness.

All the members of this big family are still active, reasonably well and doing well. This old couple are loved and highly respected by all who know them. In the afternoon and evening an informal reception was given at which all friends and acquaintances were made welcome. There is, in my opinion, a secret to the success, happiness, and prosperity, of this estimable couple, and family, and that is, that they all early in life, enlisted under the banner of Him who said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

And Benjamin, the 'happy hooligan' of my father's family, now seventy-five years of age, has had two wives, and has also raised a very interesting family of seven children, is now living at Blunt, South Dakota, and at the present writing, "is physically and mentally in a fine healthy and promising condition, and well provided for in life." Cynthia, "our youngest sister", who married A. B. Wallace, a soldier of the Civil War, and a member of the 8th Illinois Cavalry, Company A, has reared a very interesting family of eight children. She resides on her farm of 200 acres in Vernon Township, Wright County, Iowa. A. B. Wallace died twenty-two years ago, from Bright's disease and injuries received in the Civil War. She was married again to George Palmer, who has been an excellent husband and father to her first husband's children which should entitle him to some consideration, "when he comes up before St. Peter for admittance through the pearly gates," into the City of Peace. Grant that he may receive it. But Cynthia is also entitled to a rich reward beyond the river, from the fact that she has adopted no less than eight orphan children and reared them to man- and woman-hood, besides her own. God will surely bless such deeds of kindness wherever bestowed upon the needy and destitute ones on earth, "For he that giveth a cup of cold water in my name" says the Christ, "shall not lose their reward." The writer, David H. Fillmore, married Miss Anna L. Dobson, of Rockford, Illinois, in the year 1865. Seven sons were born to them, and but one of them, Floyd D. Fillmore, is now living. Three of my older sisters, Charlotte, Jane, and Rebecca, have all of them raised interesting families, "many of which have filled and are filling their places fairly well in the great battles of Human life." Some of whom will be mentioned further along in this book of my personal recollections and reminiscences, of my life.

STORY OF MY EARLY CHILDHOOD AND OF THE FIRE WHICH CAUSED OUR MOVING TO GRANDFATHER'S HOME IN JOLICURE, N. B., AND FINALLY TO THE UNITED STATES.

As I had previously said, father bought a 240 acre farm along the banks of the Miramichi River and built his house about 200 yards back from the river on a beautiful plateau of about 40 acres of timber clearing, interspread with an occasional evergreen, spruce, and balsam fir, and here and there a sugar maple, all trimmed with care and precision, eight feet from the ground. This beautiful home of my childhood faced the south and a creek about 300 yards from the house which ran east and west, and at this point emptied into the Miramichi River, and named by the Indians the Tamarack Creek. The public highway ran north and south along the river and perhaps 25 yards back from it. My father, being a mechanic, had built for the public a very substantial bridge over the Tamarack Creek, and in this little cove between the creek, the river, and the house, had erected a shingle shop where my father and first brother-in-law, Charles Crabtree, and the older boys of the family rove and shaved shingles for the Chatham and New Brunswick markets. I am very explicit about the description, from the fact that it was here where I was born, and it was here where the first incident of my life occurred, which left an impression on my young mind and brain that will never be erased until I am laid away in the silent grave. The incident referred to here, not only had to do with myself but my father's entire family, and it also goes to show that we are all, no matter how small or insignificant we may be, actors in the great drama of human life, either for good or for bad. It was a quarter to twelve

A.M. November the 4th, 1847, when my eldest sister Charlotte, then a blooming woman of twenty-four years and a mother of two sweet little girls, and one of them six months older than myself said, "Davy and Saraphina, you children go and tell the men folks to come to dinner." I felt my little boy heart swell with joy to be thus made useful, and not seeing either of the girls around, I scampered to the shingle house alone and shouted to the men folks "Dinner is ready, come immediately". As I remember it, father and Charles, my brother-in-law, and William, then a man of perhaps twenty-three years, were sitting on their horses shaving shingles. Brother John was riving them and Benjamin was packing them into quarter thousand bunches. All of them jumped up from their work on my shouting "Dinner", and Charles caught me up in his arms and kissed me, saying "Where are my two little girls?" and I answered childlike that I did not know, but for him to send them up to me as I was going to pick up pretty pebbles along the shore, of which there was an abundance of all shapes, sizes and descriptions lying high and dry upon the sandy beach. And he said, "Well, if you stay here, be sure and do no mischief", and away he ran to overtake the rest of them.

I must here describe to the reader this shingle manufacturing establishment. It stood thirty-two by sixty feet and eight foot posts on the side, set two feet in the ground, and boarded and battened up on the side with good material to keep out the snow as New Brunswick is a country of deep snows and heavy drifts. The roof, as I remember, was also boarded over with good material and battened with slabs and with a large double door, twelve feet wide opening on the east side facing the dwelling house, and with a fireplace and chimney in the south end. And as I stood for a moment contemplating the situation and felt the chilly winds of the November breezes rushing through my hair, I thought our people very careless to go away from the shingle shop and leave their fire so low, so the first thing I concluded to do to help this beautiful situation along was to replenish the fire in the fireplace which, as I thought at the time, was smouldering too low for the comfort of any one. I did this from a large pile of shavings that stood more than three times higher than my head and perhaps twenty feet away from the fireplace. And when I had, as I thought, accomplished this act of usefulness, I went down to the river margin to pick up stones. Possibly ten minutes had passed away when, on looking up for the coming of the two little girls, and now I did see them coming, but I also discovered flames and smoke proceeding forth from the roof of the shingle house. I was frightened and my heart was seemingly up in my throat and for an instant I was paralyzed, then I jumped and ran as perhaps never child ran before and left the two little girls. I rushed into the dining room where the family were eating dinner, and cried at the top of my voice, "The shingle shop is on fire," and then amid the confusion of the family, I hid in the trundle bed that was in my brother-in-laws bedroom. Practically everything was destroyed, tools, shop materials, and one hundred thousand shingles that were nicely stacked up in the shingle house preparatory to being shipped the following Monday. In one hour's time from the breaking out of the fire, nothing remained to mark the sight of the shop, save black ruins and desolation. My hiding place was not discovered until eight o'clock in the evening when my sister's two little girls were about to retire for the night, when on pulling out the trundle bed, my place of concealment was discovered. I gave them all the particulars of setting the fire as I have given them in this narrative, only, of course, in a childish way. And they came to the conclusion from my story that I must have innocently scattered shavings from the pile to the fireplace and that the fire ran out into the pile of shavings and this conflagration occurred. My father was very angry and determined to punish me, quite as much on account of my hiding away as burning the plant. As the whole family had been looking for me for an hour, and to no avail, until the trundle bed had been drawn out, and there stood the culprit before them, and as I remember it today as I pen these lines, "with fear and trembling. Father, as I said, was determined to punish me, but Charles, my brother-in-law, plead for me, and declared," that my grief and extreme sorrow, for the great calamity that I had brought on the family, was sufficient punishment for the child to bear. The fact was, that my father had been meeting with a series of financial reverses and misfortunes for a number of years, and this one capped the climax, and far exceeded them all.

My beloved sister, Rebecca, started out on life's great journey by marrying Dr. A. B. Dobson, of Rockford, Ill. The fruit of this union was three children, Julian, Frank, and Dora. Dora married Newton Sheldon, of Kane Co., Ill., who has for 30 years of his life, walked on a pair of crutches and thus, for thirty years been a constant care of devotion, for that poor unfortunate woman. God only can reward for such devotion, and that will be, somewhere; let us hope and pray; in that ideal, beyond the river of human life. The word of the master to his deciples were; I go to prepare a place for you and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am ye may be also. Thus his deciples were not left comfortless, not even under the most trying circumstances, of human existence, therefore; what a friend, the christian has in that great light of the world.

THE STORY OF OUR TRIP TO THE STATES

Never shall I forget our trip from St. John, N. B., to New York City. The ship was a sail vessel of several thousand tons and loaded with passengers and household goods bound for the states. After four days out from St. John, N. B., our ship struck a typhoon, one of the fiercest and most destructive storms the mariner ever encountered on the high seas. It swept over the ship and nearly turned her bottomside up. The captain swore terribly as he was unable to handle her facing the storm. And as she was drifting for a time in the opposite direction to what we were going, my mother approached the captain and wanted to know where he was running the ship to, and the captain replied vehemently that he was "running her to hell". This reply alarmed my mother terribly, and she got her family together and as many of the passengers as would join with us, and prayers were offered to God for protection from the storm and to have mercy on our wicked captain. For thirty-six hours the sea boiled like a kettle, and when the storm abated we found ourselves fifty miles back toward St. John, N. B.; and the dear little black dog which I had brought from the banks of the Miramichi River, and that I had insisted bringing on board the ship with the family, could not be found. Our ship was quite badly disabled, but in three days time we were on our way again and every heart was full of joy and thankfulness that our lives had been spared, as mother tried to impress upon the minds of her young family, in answer to her prayer. I was quite young to appreciate the deep significance of prayer at the time, and I wanted to know of mother what about my little black dog; this she declared had not been included in the prayers offered. And while the family mourned for the lost dog, my heart was nearly broken, but when we arrived at Chicago, Ill., we got a letter from Midgic, N. B., with the tidings that our dear little dog had returned, which appeared to be a miracle indeed to the whole family, as the question was, "How could any one have survived those churning waters for thirty-six hours," is more than any of the family could cipher out. But the conclusion that we all finally arrived at was, that the dog must have made land as early in the game as possible and traveled home on foot. The captain came to my mother and apologized by asking her forgiveness for his wicked speech, and from this time until we arrived in New York City, June 25th, 1843, everything ran smoothly, and from New York City to Buffalo we rode on the cars. And this, I suppose was the first railroad ever built on earth. And I have the pleasure of telling the reader that I rode on it. And at the World's Fair in Chicago, in 1893, I saw that same engine on exhibition, and assure the reader that it was something worth looking at in contrast with the mammoth engines today. As we all boarded the train in New York City, I saw a gang of negro slaves for the first time in my life, hard at work under the direction of an overseer; the overseer was whipping a negro woman unmercifully, so much that she fainted away and they threw a pail of cold water over her to revive her, and I can see her now in my mind's eye as I saw her then when she became conscious and ran down the street in her almost naked condition, and the overseer plying the black-snake whip around her body. Oh, how her shrieks and pleadings pierced my young soul and I turned to my mother and said, "Mother, what does all this mean?" and my mother replied, "My son, we are now in the land of human slavery," and I can truthfully say that the hatefulness of that awful scene of my childhood has never been erased from my memory. Our family made but a short stay at Buffalo with our Millard Fillmore cousins--the opportunities did not appear as good and plentiful as those represented farther west. So we all went on board what was then called a packet boat and sailed over the lakes to Chicago, Ill., where the men folks engaged in making shingles until the next spring, and at good lucrative wages. Chicago was at that time, a promising little city of about eight thousand people in 1848, and, in the meantime, the children attended school in the city, and father speculated and bought forty acres of apparently good-for-nothing swampy land at Ten Dollars per acre, and at this very present writing in the very heart of Chicago, it being located at that time out where Western Avenue is today. This property he did not hold more than six weeks when an eastern man with some money made father an offer of Twenty Dollars per acre, and the deal was closed and the money paid over so quick that father became suspicious that there was a Yankee trick in the whole transaction, and he was determined to get out of the city.

THE CRANBERRY STORY

I have heard the "Cranberry Story" many times told by Grandpa David, always with a chuckle, says Nadine Fillmore, as she tells the story here:

John Fillmore and Sarah Reed were about to be married, and the date had been set. John dressed in his very best suit of clothes, on his way to be married, by accident came upon a bog of wild cranberries. Cranberries meant MONEY and no one knew of this bog, so John got off his horse and picked cranberries all day long, getting very dirty and tired. He took the saddle blanket off his horse and put the cranberries in it.

The wedding guests came, waited a couple of hours, and then went home. Sarah Reed thought she had surely been "stood up". She had a temper, as we are told, and this didn't help matters.

Well John Fillmore arrived after dark, tired, and dirty, but with a big load of cranberries to be sold. Sarah was indeed mad and humiliated enough to call off the wedding but seeing John all tired and dirty and apologetic and especially the big load of cranberries to be sold, relented and they were married later that night, but Sarah never let him forget the humiliation he had caused her at her wedding.

THE STORY OF THE TWO CRABTREE GIRLS AND THEIR MISSIONARY PROCLIVITIES

My eldest sister's two little girls, Saraphina and Hannah, had both kept good pace with me, and at this time were developed into two fine appearing young women, one a brunette, and the other a blonde. Both of them were fairly well educated for the times. Most of their time had been spent in Chicago since coming to the states and where much better opportunities awaited them for mind culture, than possibly could be obtained in the country. And at this time, these two girls had aspired to become missionaries among the American Indians of the West, and when they heard that I was going to Kansas with their Uncle George, they came to me with their proposition, that if we would take them, they would go as missionaries to the Pottawattamies, as they had been corresponding with the officers of the Baptist Mission, situated in Waubansee County, Kansas, west of Topeka, and could start in as teachers, at Six Dollars per week. I told the girls it would have to be just as their Uncle George said, as I was only a passenger and that he owned everything but me and my oxen in our outfit, but that I should like very much to have them go along for their company's sake, so George was appealed to and, as he was also possessed with a missionary spirit, he soon gave his consent. And so full preparations were soon made to take the girls along with their missionary proclivities and a large outfit besides, consisting of Wardrobes, bedding, and provisions sufficient for two, a tent and two more camp stools, and other paraphenalia too numerous to mention, and it all went to make up a pretty big load when all four of us were on board. The only two things we had in over abundance was an excess of missionary spirit, which I think can be carried to the extreme sometimes, as the sequel of this story will indicate. But I told them if they would do the singing, praying, and preaching, I would stick to the cooking, and told them that if George's oxen gave out, I would use mine as they were extraordinary good travelers that could easy average thirty miles a day on good roads. And so I became the all around man for emergencies, and kept them singing, praying, and preaching most of the way to Kansas, and that was about all they seemed fit for. The roads were fine, the crops were good, the country through which we traveled charming, and I never dreamed of such hospitable people, for when they found that our outfit was three-fourths missionaries and going to Kansas to convert the heathen Indians, they took us all in and gave us the best they had and charged us nothing in return but our prayers, songs and sermons, and asked us to stop again if we ever called that way.

We crossed the "Fathers of Waters" at Burlington, Iowa, beautiful Iowa, the home of the uncompromising "stand patter". We drove directly through what is called today Blyth's District, the reservation, and one of the finest districts of Iowa. We noticed these particular peculiarities among the people; they built their chimneys on the outside of the house from the ground up, and they drank cistern water. We wanted to know the reason, and they said, that in case of fire, they could move the house away from the chimney, and, as to the water, that it was good enough for them, for it came from heaven and their fathers had drunk it before them, and consequently, they decided to stand pat on it. So I will reiterate, Beautiful Iowa, the home of the "stand patter", where all nature was rejoicing, and harmony seemed to prevail among all those who had joined our little caravan wending their way to the broad acres of fertile Kansas, every heart throbbing and pulse beating with new vigor in anticipation of the bright prospects before them in life. I thought what a glorious thing it is to be American citizen under the flag, our flag, the flag that makes us free and permits us as American citizens to travel anywhere on the public highways as long as we attend to our own business, but the moment another interferes with another's rights, Uncle Sam steps up and says, "Desist there, or suffer the consequences of a violated law". We could not exist very long as a nation without law, for it is in man to do wrong, and Human nature, you will find, is the same the world over; and without law some natures would go crazy with their liberties, and the normally sane would be in danger all the time from the other fellows. I am glad, therefore, that we, as a people, are protected by laws, and that all our civil and religious institutions believe in and are founded on good laws.

CONTINUATION OF THE ABOVE STORY, AND A THRILLING ACCOUNT OF A SCRAP IN DEFENSE OF ONE OF THE MISSIONARIES

As we crossed the Mississippi River, a man by the name of Reynolds joined our company with a horse team. He claimed to be from Egypt, Ill., and was on his way to Ft. Scott, Kans. He was a man, I would judge to be about thirty-five years of age, heavy set, with square shoulders, a black beard, and would weigh, perhaps about 190 or 200 pounds. We had not gone far into Iowa when he dropped in behind our outfit and stayed with us all through the state, and would join with us at our social meetings in the evening, and seemed to be somewhat religiously inclined, and it was not but a few days before he declared an undying passion of love for my niece, Sarafina, but she very emphatically and earnestly declined and repelled him, and refused to listen to the fellow's proposals on that subject, but he persisted and followed her everywhere until he made the girl's life almost a burden to her. I tried to persuade George that it was his moral duty to knock the head off from him for his persistent impudence to the girl. But, no, George was not a combatant, and besides, he did not have the moral courage to forbid the fellow from coming around our quarters or forbid him cooking his coffee on our stove. But he believed in letting that unprincipled wretch run over, and practically insult, those two young ladies after he had promised their mother to protect them; for he believed every time in "turning the other cheek also" and I was admonished to use forbearance, and trust in the Lord, and it would all come out well in the end. I wanted to know of George who was to use forbearance in behalf of these girls, as they were helpless to protect themselves against the persistent annoyances of this strong man. I told him that we had pledged ourselves to their mother that we would protect them so long as they appealed to us for protection. George said if I was determined to quarrel with the fellow, I must do it alone as he would not help for he did not believe in quarreling, and that I was but a kid, and if I persisted in having a scrap with the fellow I would certainly get licked anyway. But I will admit that I was afraid of the fellow. I had never had a wicked fight, but, notwithstanding all this, I had told the girls that any time they needed help to call on me and I would defend them if I lost my life in doing it. The fellow had become very impudent by this time, and George would become frightened the moment he came into our quarters, and would make an excuse to go and look after the teams. We got into Missouri and camped for the night on Locus Creek and near a little town by the name of St. John.

I had cooked the supper and each one of us were still occupying camp stools enjoying the twilight of the evening while we were eating supper. The stars were twinkling in the starry heavens, and the mocking bird and robin redbreast were presaging a gathering storm, when the stillness of the evening was broken by a piercing scream and my name resounded through the camp for help. I sprang to my feet, and there, not thirty feet away, in the twilight, stood Reynolds with his arms around my niece, and both of them were struggling like beavers. But before the echo, succeeding the cry for help, died away in the distance, that contemptible, insulting wretch lay groveling in the dust. I pounded and kicked, and he begged for quarters. Twenty men and women stood around and plead in his behalf, and I yielded to their entreaty and let him get up, but the moment he was on his feet, "he rushed for me like a fiend, but I side-stepped him, caught him around the neck with my left arm, and good-bye Reynolds, for he was my huckleberry from that on, and no one interfered, until he was all in. And after hearing the facts in the case from the girls, every one said that it served him right and he deserved all that he got. And everyone, even George, said that it was a providential thing that I was there to care for the girls and the crowd of emigrants took a vote and expelled him from the company, and it was said he returned to Egypt, the place from whence he came, and we did not see him again.

From this last adventure to the end of our journey in the west, nothing of moment occurred. I was the hero of the hour, and a half dozen men, including George, wanted me to teach them the art of self-defense in boxing. I will say that we had a much better time, in so far as sociability went, than when the missionaries were giving so much time and attention to praying and singing and attracting uninvited people into one's quarters. There is a time, Solomon says, for everything. The time to pray is, undoubtedly, in the closet, and to be sure and shut the door, and "thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly," or in other words, when you come unto the house of the Lord dedicated for public prayer, he has promised to reward and honor you. I believe most emphatically in prayer, for it is the sincere desire of the soul breathed out to God, and whatever we will thus go to Him for, and ask in sincerity, we will help Him to answer by living consistent lives, in harmony with that prayer; that is, however, my understanding of prayer.

Thus we were not only traveling on the public highways to Kansas, but we were all scholars, in the great school of nature and also of cause and effect. We arrived at St. Joseph, Missouri, on the afternoon of October 22, 1858, and crossed the big muddy river the following morning on a ferry boat that plyed the Missouri at that city. We accomplished this by paying seventy-five cents for each wagon and team attached thereto, which meant that the family with one yoke of cattle or span of horses attached to the wagon, paid the same as the parties with three yoke and wagon. I made the bargain, and it was very satisfactory all around, for competition at the time was the life of trade. Five dollars for team and wagon being the ordinary price. But ferry boat captains will quarrel the same as other men in trade where they don't pool, and one of the captains finally offered to take us all over for fun, but we paid our seventy-five cents and got a good ride, and while crossing, caught a cat fish weighing 100 pounds, which furnished us all the good meat we needed to Topeka, Kansas, that being our objective point. Topeka means small potatoes in the Pottawatamie dialect, and is eighty-five miles west from Kansas City, Mo., and is situated on the Caw River. In 1858 it was the largest and most pretentious city in the state, and claimed, if I remember correctly, a population of 2500 people. The public buildings and many of the fine residences were built of lime stone, which was found in abundance cropping out of the hills and ledges along the banks of the creeks and rivers of the country, making building material cheaper in the state; so stone houses took the place of log cabins, so numerous in Illinois and Missouri.

STORY ABOUT JOHN FILLMORE COMING TO SEE HIS SON, DAVID, WOUNDED IN CIVIL WAR

Ten days after my arrival at Frederick City, Md., and consignment to the hospital, I wrote to my parents a letter, telling them briefly of my getting wounded on the 8th day of July at Williamsport, in an endeavor to intercept General Robert E. Lee's retreat into Virginia, after his defeat at Gettysburg. And, although I was wounded through the body, which the physicians called a dangerous wound, yet to give themselves no uneasiness whatever, as I had been brought to Frederick City, where the people were more than half union, and that I was receiving the very best of care and attention, from both the doctors and citizens. But that did not pacify my parents. It being harvest time in Illinois, father put all his affairs on the farm into my brother Benjamin's care and he came to Frederick City, where he arrived on the 27th of the month. It was about 6 o'clock in the day, and as my charming little nurse was feeding me my evening meal, an old white haired man with wrinkled brow and three score years and ten opened the north door of my ward just far enough for me to see his face, as he protruded his head through the door, and said to the steward in charge, "Is there a young man in this hospital by the name of David H. Fillmore?" I heard his trembling voice and recognized it although seventy-five feet away and immediately waved my hands and shouted: "Here am I father", and the steward lead him to my couch, where he prostrated himself upon his knees, burying his face in my bed covering, and wept like a child, I all the time patting him on the head with my hand, and assuring him that I was still alive. It was ten minutes before he could properly control himself, and then he arose to his feet like an iron man, all traces of weakness having disappeared, and said, "Well David, I was fearful of finding you dead, my boy", and then said he, "every time I have shut my eyes, since receiving your letter, I saw you with a mortal wound, and I have come to carry you home, if the doctors will let me have you."

But doctors Wear, Johnson and others, assured him that it would not do to move me, under any circumstances whatever, and thus after staying with me for one week, and seeing the good and efficient care that I was receiving, he went home contented, believing that I would certainly recover, and that he would again see me a well man, because, as he said, I had the nerve, constitution and confidence to pull her through.

And thus we parted, with both our hearts full of faith and hope.

I write these reminiscences about my father, principally to show the young people of the 20th century, the grand patriotic material that largely comprised our fathers of 61 to 65, for I think he was a fair sample of the loyal men, who freely gave their sons, to die, if need be, for the preservation of the Union. And then again, he, perhaps more than many others manifested the fact, that the boy he had given his adopted country held a high and exalted place in his patriotic breast. And I shall never forget to the day of my death, how he pressed my hand at parting, and said, while gazing into my eyes, "Dave, obey the little girl", referring to the sweet little sister of charity, who was assigned to nurse and feed me, and whose memory I shall ever cherish with the greatest of pleasure.

STORY ABOUT THE COPPERHEAD

But to my story. At noon before taking my departure from St. Charles, A. B. Wallace and I went to Mr. Marvens Hotel for dinner. Mr. Marven being sick at the time, Mrs. Marven, his wife, was in charge. Wallace and I had just been seated with about twenty other soldiers and civilians along the opposite side of a long dining room table, bringing me near the foot and facing the entrance way into the dining room, when in walked a husky, big fellow, "with his best girl, and both of them wearing Copperhead Badges on their hat and bonnet," and apparently to me at the time, he insolently demanded dinner for himself and his girl. Mrs. Marven said in reply, "No, sir, you cannot get your dinners at my table to-day. You were both here yesterday, and got your dinners, and went away without paying your bill, and besides that, sir, you both claim to be Copperheads, and those kind of people, cannot eat at my table when I know it, and therefore, I command you both, to go out of my house, or I have friends here who will put you out." He thereupon exclaimed vehemently in language not fit to publish, and in a very menacing attitude towards the landlady, "I be blankedy blank if we will go out for you or your friends, until after we get our dinners", and with that he made a stride towards the table in front of me, as though determined to be seated. But I was instantly on my feet, boiling with rage and indignation, but as cooly as I could control myself, addressed the fellow as follows: "Young man, if you were a gentleman you would pay your bill of yesterday, and take your lady and retire from this room, as long as the landlady refuses to feed you on account of your Copperhead proclivities". "Are you a friend of this woman?" said he. "I am", I replied, "or any other woman when she is insulted by a Copperhead. Get out of her house." I presume I said it as though I meant it, and as he went down that hall to the outer door in rather a hurry, and reached the brickwalk he uttered language to me that no man of those times would take from another without either giving him a thrashing or taking one. So I was really up against it, on my own account, as well as his being a Copperhead, and boasting of it, and his insults and profanity to the landlady. A half a dozen others by this time were insisting on thrashing the fellow, among them being A. B. Wallace, all of them apparently knowing that I was a badly wounded man at the time, and on a convalescent furlough. But I thanked them and earnestly declared that it was my battle, and, "in far less time than it takes to tell of this conflict with an enemy of the Union, one hundred men and women stood in a circle around us," and I found that my early training while at school, stood me well in hand, for the fellow was thirty pounds heavier than myself at the time, I looking pale and emaciated from the effects of my wounds. But in five minutes the battle was all over and as David Harum said, the other fellow was all in. He was utterly unable to cry out for quarters as his head had fetched up several times rather abruptly on the brick pavement and Dr. Baird of St. Charles, finally comprehending the significance of the situation, rushed into the ring and laid his hand on me and said "Hold on Fillmore, the fellow needs bringing to before he receives any more punishment."

Four days afterwards, sergeant Tom Brown of my company saw the fellow up at Geneva without his girl and remarked to him, "Where abouts did they run you through a threshing machine?" and he replied "Oh, up at St. Charles the other day among them blankedy blanked John Farnsworth's Veteran 8th Illinois Cavalry men" and he and his crowd received but a shout of jeers and contempt from our men, as all the soldiers were aware of what had occurred at Marvens, and what had led up to the conflict, and were glad that he had got his dues.

I did not even get a scratch from the fellow but my hands were a little bruised and Mrs. Marven did them up in camphor and glycerine, "and I received the thanks of the whole house and also the commendations from Mr. Marven in shouting to me from his bedroom window above, his thanks," and to come again, and that I should always be welcome at his house.

All the loyal men and women of St. Charles who heard of the occurrence were glad, as this same fellow had been bold and impudent on a good many other occasions in St. Charles, causing disturbances at public meetings in the city, and this was his first taking down. And therefore all good and loyal people rejoiced and I certainly did, "as I felt no bad physical results, and I believed it to be all in the line of duty, for humanity's sake, and the good of my country," and this was a picture lesson to the Copperheads who were practically prodding us in our backs, while we fellows stood on the firing line, in the front of battle, to preserve the nation, "as well as their homes, from devastation," and in many instances, no doubt, from complete destruction.

Etta Viola Chandler 01 was buried Jan. 24, 1882 because it was so cold. The following is an account of her sickness as told and written by Mabel Chandler Harris and published by the Pictorial Times, Topeka, Kansas, 1970, entitled:

HIGH COURAGE

"I believe I'll wash." The tall straight girl who uttered these words looked up at the Kansas sky that January day in 1882 with an appraising eye. The blue of the heavens with its few white floating cloudlets was as a vast dome over that prairie homestead located in northern Lyon County. She whiffed the warm air and turned determinedly back into the little stone house that was home for herself, five brothers and three sisters. Like the commanding officer that she was she marshalled her forces: "Gene, you and Henry get busy right now and get these rocks back in place." She pointed to the corner of the kitchen where the wall that had been so hastily constructed during the spring in 1879 had already begun to tumble, leaving a large gap in that place of the outer wall of the all purpose room of their dwelling.

"Charlie, you and Bert get the team and bring in that jag of hay from the stack in the lower meadow. You know we cannot expect this good weather to hold this time of year."

"Leo Nettie, you get the breakfast dishes washed and keep Annie out of the draft until the boys get that wall mended. I am going to wash."

"Maley, you and Lottie bring your buckets and we will get this wash water on to heat. We never have enough clothes until wash day then there is never soap, clothes line, nor water to half do the job." She gave the younger children an encouraging smile, adding "As soon as the water is in the kettle you two can get ready for school."

She sang softly as she picked up her wooden buckets and the three hurried to the well down near the slough and the corrals. As she rubbed on the board, her tubs near the hold in the wall which the boys clumsily were filling in, Etta Viola Chandler, seventeen years of age, sensed that the air that had been so warm in the early morning was somewhat chilly now. She looked at the sky. It was still blue and the sunshine was beautiful. However, she hurried the boys. "Do hurry," she said, "and get those rocks in place. There is surely going to be a change in the weather." She ran out with another load of wet clothes and spread them on the brown grass. An hour later as she carried out the last garments, her sleeves rolled to her elbows and her hair wet about her face, an icy blast of wind struck her. A shiver ran through her frame and she hurried more with the spreading of the children's clothes on the grass. The ragged underclothes and the boys pants flapped in the wind from the clothesline. Presently the dirty suds and rinse water were emptied and the house again set in order. The hole in the wall was stopped up and the tired girl dropped into a chair by the hot stove. She was shaking with a chill. Little Annie, just learning to walk, toddled to her knee, but Etta called to Leo Nettie, "Come and get her, Nettie, I declare I believe I am having a chill." Her teeth chattered uncontrollably.

The boys came in for their noon meal, stamping cold feet and blowing red fingers. "It sure looks like a storm is coming," Gene predicted, as they ate their scant meal of cornbread and fried rabbit. Fortunately they all liked rabbit meat as these little animals were plentiful and easy to catch. Fortunately, too there was milk to drink.

Etta could not eat. She felt hot and then cold. As the boys sat around after the meal, little Annie fell asleep in her arms and with a reluctant apology the sick girl did an unusual thing. She dragged herself to the bed in the corner of the room and tucking little Annie under the covers she threw herself down beside her. The others looked in astonishment at each other. "Let's be quiet and let her sleep," Leo Nettie said softly, "Land knows she needs the rest."

This twelve year old Leo Nettie then washed the dishes and put them on the curtained shelves near the stove. The boys sat on the wide board floor and played mumble peg with their pocket knives. The weather was certainly changing. The wind was coming from the northwest in spasmodic gusts and with it were tiny whiffs of snow.

"We better get those clothes in," said Gene, the oldest boy, a strapping boy of fifteen. Together they brought in the partially dried washing and piled it on chairs near the fire. Leo Nettie with an uneasiness she could not define, spread the garments out and soon the room was filled with steam as they dried.

Etta awakened, her head ached and she lay still. The warm bed felt good to her. She saw that the clothes had been brought in and were drying. She spoke her gratitude to the sister and brothers and they beamed with her praise. Soon after four o'clock the children came from school.

They stood very near the stove warming themselves. Five year old Maley announced that Mr. Day, the teacher, had said there would be no school the next day if it snowed during the night and the roads were drifted.

The evening chores were attended to by the older boys and then supper of cornbread and rabbit was eaten in silence. Everything seemed wrong when Etta still lay on the bed. The group soon went to bed, too. The house was quiet. The wind tore about the little house. Sleet fell relentlessly on the roof. Etta now awakened, quietly undressed, and went to bed properly under the covers. She lay uncomfortable--first hot and then cold--among the blankets. She could not sleep.

"My," she grieved, "I so hope I am not going to be sick and even pa not here to look after the young ones."

In her wakefulness, she lived over the three years they had been here on this horrible Kansas prairie. She recalled distinctly the moment when the two covered wagons drawn by tired horses had turned off the Santa Fe Trail in northern Lyon County and had gone a quarter of a mile south to this location where their stone house had been started by a former homesteader. She saw again the thrill of high hope in her mother's face as they pegged their tent into place.

"George," she said, and there was a note of finality in her voice, "this is not much of a place--upland--no trees--but I say here we will make our home. It will not be any harder for us than for these other settlers around here. We are not going to move any more."

"I agree with you, Hannah," said George Chandler, her husband, "here we will make our home."

That was in March 1879. How cold the spring had been! How long it had taken to get this half built house put together! How hard the sod had been when pa tried to plow! How the wind did blow! How she had hated it all!

No wonder all the families around them were not finding life in Kansas at this time and place easy but it seemed that tragedy did not follow others like it had her family. She recalled the rattle snake's bite on Gene's leg that first summer and how pa had saved the boy's life by splitting the leg of the screaming boy and then with his own mouth sucking the wound until no more blood or fluid of any kind came from it. The rattler was a huge one and had seven rattles and a button. They had killed it all right--chopped off its head--but it still wiggled all day long. After that none of them ever fooled with a rattlesnake, because they recognized one whenever they saw it. The girl shuddered again as she remembered ma's pain when little sister Delphia had come the second spring. Delphia had been a blue baby and had lived only two weeks. She died March 28, 1880. Her little grave had been dug right in the northeast corner of the new Bushong Cemetery, which had been bought but not yet been laid out.

Ma had dragged all that summer in spite of her continued high hopes and then had worn herself out caring for Charlie, who in haying time had slipped off a load of hay and broken his leg. In spite of all that good Dr. Wright of Americus could do to relieve him, ten year old Charlie often cried all night with pain and ma, although she was again in the family way, stayed all night by his side trying to ease the suffering when the splintered bone continued to work out through the festering flesh. Pa took his turn, too. He was great for hot poultices. They did seem to ease the pain and draw out those pieces of bone from the leg.

Etta gave herself a jerk and turned over in her limited space. Little Annie stirred and the girl soothed the baby to quietness. She rubbed her own throbbing head--her hands were cold but they felt good when pressing against her strangely burning eyes. She could not sleep. Her thoughts reverted to that most terrible time of all back in March 1881.

It had been then, March 10, when Ma went again into that dreadful time of childbirth. The younger children were bundled off to the neighbors. Mrs. Day, Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. Sanders, homesteaders like ourselves, had been so good. When the baby was finally born two days later, it was alright but Ma was so sick that they never even thought to name little sister. Everyone was trying to help Dr. Wright save the mother's life, but Hannah Priscilla Chandler had indeed made her last earthly move and when the baby girl was five days old and was peevishly crying for some satisfying food, the mother closed her eyes to too much bodily pain and want and longing.

It was then that George W. Chandler bought a lot in the Bushong Cemetery, two miles south of his farm and Hannah, his efficient and helpful wife, was laid in it and the body of little Delphia was brought from the corner and laid at her mother's head. This Kansas mother had died March 17, 1881.

Etta Viola Chandler was at the time sixteen years of age. She was big and strong and knew how to do the home work, so she became the woman of that upland claim. She was naturally an organizer and a commander so things went on about as usual. The baby was named Hannah Priscilla, for the dead mother, but she was lovingly called Annie. Life was not always dull and laden with heavy work, and too, Etta had a beau. Even under the bad conditions her love for her father and the children made the days short--and surely much better times were just ahead for all of them.

But doctor bills, funeral expenses, grocery bills, and the need of clothing for all of them, nearly drove the heartbroken father distracted. George W. Chandler, when a lad had served in the Hospital Corps of the Northern Army and there he had learned to cook. He tried to raise a crop that summer of 1881, but when autumn came and little grain had been produced on the land that God had intended for pasture, he faced the coming winter with something akin to despair. He must earn some money.

The father talked this over with the older children, and Etta, Gene, and Henry, with some optimism of youth, readily agreed with his plan to take a job in an Emporia, Kansas, hotel as cook for the winter. The children all agreed to obey Etta and do just as she said. So with many misgivings and secret fears, George Chandler, forty years old, left the little stone house on the prairie for a good paying job in the city, twenty miles away. He hoped he would be able to pay his debts, buy family necessities and come home the following spring.

Etta had taken her responsibilities seriously. Like an adult person but sometimes with girlish immaturities, she carried on day by day. Every night found her with tired muscles, throbbing head and pressing problems. How could she manage on the morrow?

And now in the dead of winter when the weather was at its worst she was lying here in her bed sick. She knew that she was very hot, too, and that she was very sick. She thought of her dear mother who had always known what to do under any circumstances. She lifted her arms pleadingly out in the room and sobs shook her. "Oh Ma," she sobbed, "I need you so much." She continued to toss, finally sleeping fitfully. After a long, long time morning came. Gene came from the bedroom. He noted her feverish face. Etta answered the question he had blurted out. Yes, she must have a doctor and Henry declared he would be glad to make the trip to Americus. So as soon as he had eaten, he saddled his favorite horse and went for their good friend, Dr. Wright. Gene went out in the bitter cold to do the chores, paying special attention to all the live things under his care, just as his father always did. Leo Nettie ironed the clothes and the children all cared for little Annie, who was unusually fretful as she sensed the uneasiness of the others. Before noon a kind neighbor came in to help. Henry had stopped at the Sanders place on his way to Americus. She too was alarmed at the serious condition of the sick girl on the bed. Early in the afternoon, Dr. Wright arrived and with gruff frankness told them that Etta was a very sick girl. "She has pneumonia," he said, "where is Mr. Chandler?" When they all explained about Pa working in Emporia, he said, "I'll do all I can for her, but her father must get here as soon as possible." He left some medicine, carefully giving the directions, and reluctantly left the house.

Soon other neighbors came in bringing food and the comfort of their presence was gratifying. No one had started to Emporia for Mr. Chandler. Gene stood looking out of the window. The snow was piling up and the wind was cold. Henry stood close to the stove trying to get warm again after his trip to Americus. Etta lying on the bed was conscious of Gene's hesitancy. Her sympathy was aroused but well she knew their father would want to be home under the circumstances. Then too--she must have Pa. She sat up in her bed and in her old way she marshalled her forces.

"Gene," she said, "you will have to go for Pa. I am more sorry than I can tell you. Ride Ned, he is the strongest horse on the place and you and Pa can both ride him back."

"Leo Nettie, keep the fire burning hard. Don't let the house get cold and Gene, eat some dinner and then see that the chickens and stock are well cared for, because this night will be hard on them at the best."

"Bert, you and Charlie, get in plenty of fuel and water."

"Lottie, you see that the littler ones are kept happy so they won't bother Leo Nettie who has so much to look after."

She sank back and then turning again to Gene she almost whispered "Tell Pa not to worry but to come as quickly as he can. You take the heavy blanket off the bed to wrap up in and oh Gene I wish you did not need to go." She turned to the others in the room. "Thank you, Mrs. Sanders, and all you others for coming." Her beautiful eyes swept the circle of faces and paused with a reassuring smile for the tall neighbor lad who stood with her big brothers. "I'll be alright when Pa gets here," she ended confidently lying back on her pillow.

Silently each one attended to his appointed task. The tall neighbor boy went out with Gene to see that everything was as good as possible for the dangerous trip to Emporia. Besides the cold, visibility would be poor and there would be many drifts to buffet on the road which was really little more than a path most of the way.

But Gene was well wrapped and with his back to the wind and with the big horse willing, he made steady progress, yet it was well after dark when the chilled and hungry boy finally reached the hotel in Emporia. George Chandler greeted his son's announcement with consternation and he felt a premonition of impending disaster.

The hotel owner was kind but obdurate. "The supper must be served," he said. "The house is full of guests, and anyway, it will be much better to wait until morning. No one can hope to make a trip to Bushong and beyond on a night like this."

Gene standing by his father's side listened to the man but remembering Etta's words. "Tell Pa not to worry but to come as soon as he can" said, "Pa, it's bad but let me feed Ned so he can rest a bit and then let us be going Etta wants you."

So while the horse ate and rested, Gene warmed by the oven door and had a good supper. The anxious father served the evening meal. Hastily then he prepared for the trip home, in the face of one of Kansas' worst blizzards. Well he knew, too, that they would be facing directly into the storm as they headed northwest into the open country.

At first, both Gene and his Father rode Ned. The horse was not as fresh as he had been six hours earlier, nor as willing to face the needle sharp sleet that cut the faces of the trio. The animal was urged on by the worried man with the reins. The boy dug his face into his Father's protecting back but his feet and legs soon became numb and he sobbed soft whispering sobs that cut into the heart of the father who tried to comfort the lad with kind encouragement, but a real fear had now assailed him too. He had lost his bearings. He was not sure he was guiding the horse in the right direction.

"I will have to trust the horse and God," he told himself, "I do not know where we are." So he fastened the reins around the pommel of the saddle, giving the horse his head and the animal seeming to sense the urgency of the man's knees struggled on through the drifts around them. Of course this added to the distance and Mr. Chandler fretted and worried for fear that they were not going right until he was reassured by the lights and recognizable streets of Americus. He knew then that Ned knew the way and would get them home if the two humans could endure the low temperatures of the night.

They went doggedly forward and when the man began to be sleepy in spite of himself he knew he must act. He stopped the horse and slid out of the saddle. At first he could hardly support himself and clung to the stirrup. The horse dropped its head to the snow and snorted the furry icicles from his nostrils. The man pulled the thoroughly chilled boy into the saddle and carefully wrapped the blanket about his cold feet and legs. He removed the long wool scarf from about his own neck and wound it round and round the head and shoulders of his son. He reached out his long arms and slapped his hands against his chest until he felt a renewed circulation of blood in his veins. Then he stamped up and down until his feet did not feel so much like frozen lumps. When in this way he was somewhat restored he gave Ned a slap on the rump and grasped the stirrup firmly. Thus they proceeded on their way.

The wind did not lessen. The cold became more intense. The man decided it was after midnight and he was sure they were still several miles from home. He gave himself up to thought. He believed in prayer and he had to have some help for the son in the saddle and for the precious daughter who had been so faithful during these months when he had been forced to be away from home. As he prayed he was strengthened. He felt sure that now they would reach home. Gene seemed to be asleep on the horse. The man continued his thoughts. He remembered himself as a young man happily marrying his Hannah Priscilla Crabtree. He remembered their home life in Missouri and the flowing reports of cheap land in Kansas. These reports had fired both his and his wife's imagination, so he had purchased their present home from a local land agent whom he had trusted implicitly. They had loaded their belongings in the two big wagons and with the crated chickens fastened underneath the wagon-beds, and with the boys driving the cows and extra horses they came west from Kansas City on the great trail and in about a week reached their destination in northern Lyon County, Kansas. No one would ever know his bitter disappointment when he had first seen the treeless, poor upland farm that he had bargained for. He had not known there was so much pasture in all the world. He had dreamed of a farm in the bend of a creek, but the creek turned out to be a gully that passed through his land a raging torrent after a big rain, a dry slough the remainder of the time.

The man staggered now as he clung to the ever slower moving horse. His arms ached but again he poured dogged determination into his being. He resolutely lifted one foot after the other, glad that Gene was quiet.

The night was clearing too and in the whiteness he recognized the little cemetery. Ned must have come this far west to avoid some very deep snow drift. The horse was doing fine to know so much even if it did make the way a mile longer. Thought continued like a flowing stream that would not be stopped. Oh yes, they had come to that upland claim and had worked at making a home. And then "Oh Dear God" there had been Delphia, the blue baby. Disconnectedly his mind labored on. Dust to Dust, Ashes to Ashes, the preachers always said these words in burial services. With cold misgivings he asked himself, "Is there more than that in life?" Hannah was taken when he had needed her so badly. Was she better off than he this terrible night? He could not tear his thoughts from the harrowing experience of moving little Delphia's body from the corner to the place at the head of her mother.

The world in which he lived now was not a frozen-bitter cold one. The time was not past midnight but noon of a warm May day. The little disinterred coffin rested on the green grass. As his helpers stood around he obeyed an impulse to open the lid and see his little darling child again. He stooped and did just that. In the first instant as they all looked the baby form was there in its original angelic beauty. Then there was the impact of warm air and the little form crumbled into a tiny mound of ashes. The man drew himself back into his present surroundings. "I must be awfully cold to let myself think in this way," he said. "I will not doubt! The word says, The spirit shall return to God who gave it. How cold I am! God help me," he prayed, "to be able to say, even tonight, The Lord hath given and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord. I know that God giveth his children strength."

The exalted man made the final declaration aloud and Gene mumbled "What did you say pa?" The father answered, "We will get home, we are almost there."

It was about three o'clock when the horse stopped at the stone house. The man gave a shout and dragged the nearly frozen boy from the saddle. The door flew open and Henry followed by the tall neighbor boy rushed out and half carried them into light and warmth. Charlie, the lame boy limped away with old Ned, and while the people in the house worked over the man and the boy, restoring them with a tub of snow, he fed and rubbed the dumb animal that had brought his father and brother home at last.

When only partially recovered from his nights experience the man whose sandy hair had turned white during the last twelve hours, turned to the bedside of his sick daughter.

"I knew you would come, Pa," were her only words, and the father, with spasms of pain crossing and re-crossing his fine face, held the hands that so confidently had been placed in his. He realized that all his efforts and desires to save this beloved daughter had been in vain.

As dawn broke over the windswept hillside Etta Viola

Chandler died. The father's long arms reached as many of his children as he could clasp and as they clung to him or to each other he bowed his head in submission and whispered so all could hear, "Thy will be done."

That was the morning of January 19, 1882. The place was a quarter of a mile south of the original Santa Fe trail that wended its way across Northern Lyon Co., Kansas. The Old Santa Fe Trail which was the way of thousands of people who went west in the eighteen hundreds and with their heads, and hearts, and hands literally created a democracy the likes of which is not found any where else on our earth.

Because of the bitter cold, Etta Viola Chandler, seventeen and one half years of age could not be buried in the little Bushong Cemetery beside her mother until January 24, 1882.

08-00239-02 CHARLES WESLEY FILLMORE[9] (William[8], John[7], Jemima[6], Josiah[5], Samuel[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Palmer[1]), of Clandeboye, Man., born Nov. 10, 1851 at Kane Co., Ill.; died Oct. 25, 1931 at Clandeboye, Winnipeg, Man.; married Mar. 11, 1879 at Independence, Iowa, Margaret Jane, daughter of Isaac Johnson and Margaret Jane (Mathews) Parker, of , born Mar. 5, 1848 at Clinton Co., Ohio; died Dec. 6, 1924 at Winnipeg, Man.; Charles was Pres. of Oil Refinery Co. and had a coffin factory, etc.; both are buried in Elmwood Cemetery at Winnipeg, Man.[210]

"Charles Wesley taught school in his early life. Then he and his wife taught. He earned enough money to enter the Law Dept. of the State University of Iowa and graduated in 1853, same class with his wife's brother Alonzo C. Parker.

"In 1901 he and his family moved to Winnipeg, Man., Canada, where he organized the Winnipeg Oil Co., refining oil and utilizing the by-products. He was President and General Manager of the Company. In 1915 he sold this refinery to the Standard Oil Co. and retired. He had large interests in the City."[432]

"Mr. Fillmore for many years was a resident of Chicago, but he came to Winnipeg with his family in 1901 from Peterson, Iowa, where he was a lawyer and banker. He founded the Winnipeg Oil Company shortly after his arrival, which business was purchased by the North Star Oil Co. in 1916. Mr. Fillmore retained an interest in the North Star but in 1916 he founded the Winnipeg Casket Company, and for a few years took an active part in its development.

"About eight years ago he retired and purchased land in the Clandeboye district, where he laid out one of the finest grain and livestock farms in the province. In the last ten years he had spent the winters in the south and the summers on the farm with his son.

"While a resident of Winnipeg he was a member of Central Congregational Church, and for some years was on the Board of Management."[216]

It was stated that Mr. Fillmore was highly regarded and was a progressive and enterprising citizen, whose word was his bond. He was a business man who had taken a great interest in the development of Winnipeg and the province.

07 Millard Franklin, b. Oct. 1, 1908; 10-01204.
08 Bernard Austin, b. Nov. 16, 1910; 10-01205.

"William Austin Fillmore went to Epworth Seminary and Fayette College. He taught school for a number of years and was both teacher and Principal or Professor as they were called in those days. He taught in Little Rock and Beloit, Iowa after his marriage. He took his Doctor's work at Cornell and came to Beresford, So. Dak. and practiced there seven years, then to Redfield, So. Dak. in 1906, where he practiced until his death.

"One night in 1908 the hospital burned to the ground. William set about to build a large new hospital. In 1909 it was completed. It was a fine large place of 50 rooms. Because of his love for sports, a gymnasium was built in the basement; this also included a steam heated swimming pool.

"His success seemed assured. People came from far off towns and the hospital was soon filled with patients. William worked without thought of himself and although he seemed strong and healthy he was unable to stand the severe tests on his strength. He became suddenly ill. Trips were made to see Mayo Bros. at Rochester and other places, but of no avail. In 1910, the last of April, after only one year of service in the new hospital, the grim reaper took the Doctor from his family. Bernard, his youngest child was born six months after his father's death.

"Different ones of the family took turns staying at Etta's sister Beadie Leach's home in Coggan, Iowa, to help in the bind at home. Orlo worked on a farm and took over a delivery service. Leone, Paul and Charles lived for a year or so at Beadie's. An accident occurred one summer when Charles fell beneath the wheel of a wagon and it severed his ear and broke his jaw. Beadie and Jim did the best they could for him. When he recovered, they begged to have him to raise. He lived with them until he graduated from college at University Park, Iowa.

"In 1918 Etta and her sons Paul and Orlo and a nephew Chalmer Richardson bought a light plant at Atkinson, Nebr.

and moved there until 1923 when she moved to Mitchell and rented Myra and Clarence's home while they were in Sioux City, Iowa.

"Paul's wife Lela died in 1929 and Paul rented a little home on the edge of the Weslyan campus, where he brought his little children, and grandma cared for them there, with Millard and Bernard also. After Paul and Lois were married they soon needed more room and they with grandma moved to Duff Street.

"In 1893 Etta had attended the first exposition with her father. In 1930's she and Bernard went to N. Y., Niagara Falls, Canada, and World's Fair at Chicago.

"Etta became ill in 1935 with cancer of the tongue and died in Paul's home in Mitchell, So. Dak., 17 days before her 67th birthday."[210]

Letters from Dora Louise Dobson Sheldon to Frances A. Wallace DeFrance:

"Dear Fanny:

"Here it is early in the morning and had my sleep out. Yesterday I fell and hurt myself but not too bad, was going to help quilt and had to take the bus, and for once forgot to ask the dear Lord to help me to be careful, as when I have that on my mind, am careful and watch my feet and traffic. It wasn't icy so started off and not a block from home, tripped on sidewalk not level and down I went, struck on my left hand, my thumb will bother me for some time; my clothes protected my knee, am so thankful it was no worse. Our granddaughter with her three boys are here so there's something doing all the time.

"We are having a Feb. thaw, it won't be long now until Spring. Have worked on wool pieces until I am tired, have the second comfort top about finished, did it all by hand. I am sleeping much better since I started drinking a cup of hot milk in the middle of the night, sometimes have Ovaltine in it.

"Well what did you think of my memories? Did it make you think of those days? Guess you were too small so far.

"Once during that winter just before the twins were born, on a Saturday we were just about out of wood, and Uncle went to the river to chop some and Aunt went to see Aunt Jane. Uncle had brought one load home and it looked like a blizzard coming, but he had to go back as he had left Silas in the woods chopping and he would not know of the oncoming storm, I was scared, only a little wood, so I gathered up all the chips, everything I could find and had them in the house; can remember now how scared I was, for those blizzards lasted about three days and I thought, how can I keep you in bed, as you were the baby, for that was where we would have to stay; Fred, Otis, John, you and myself. Along in the middle of the night they came, they were scared too and when in the night they could see a little they started, only three miles, but they got lost, finally Uncle let the horses have their heads and they brought them home; how, the dear Lord only knows.

"Well I was teaching on a third grade certificate $22.00 a month and $2.50 for board. Uncle came after me the first Friday night, I was needed at home, those tiny babies were sick and they grew worse and worse from day to day, no one knew what was the matter, including the Doctor. They had spasms and we would have to watch them close and when they come out, lift them up. How they lived through it, I do not know but I always thought it left its mark on Elwood. Alma Fillmore boarded at Uncle George's, when she taught her first term of school, they also had a hired girl.

"The 4th of July I went to Alden with Charley Peterson, Ceaphus had an Oakland girl, that afternoon there was a tornado and it looked as if it was coming right down Main Street; the people crowded into the churches, others went across the river and was out in a drenching rain and hail stones, we stayed with some of Peterson's folks in a house. The tornado veered off so we did not get the full benefit, but we did get the rain and hail and when we started home after dark, the horses balked when they came to a bridge, and when the boys got out and looked to see what was wrong, found it had been torn up, so we had to go thru the water. When we got home the barn was gone, but was near; the school house was destroyed, one of the sills was driven ever so many feet in the ground and the rest in the air. When school was out I was home again, that summer we got a new harvester and they bound the grain on it; Uncle hired Walter Howard, and I drove the two span of horses on it - with a promise of a new dress. The grain must have brought some money as I had a new dress. They picked out the material and Mrs. Inman made it up. I hated it but had to wear it, as I didn't have anything else, or wear my homespun as I had let Uncle have most of my money earlier; I had to have some as I was going to school at Webster City, but that was the year Uncle clap-boarded the house and built the lean-to, with bedroom and kitchen. Our folks or Uncle was acquainted with some folks at Webster City and they thought they had a place for me to work for my board and room, visited with them a week and then went to the place to work and there was a man, woman and child, there with them until the last of Feb. and then he was going to move out on the farm, and as I could not find a place to work wrote the folks to come after me; Uncle came and took a load out for them on his way home, stayed all night, put up the beds and got things straightened around before we left. We heard she died two weeks afterwards, she was a consumptive. Well I was needed at home as the twins had the whooping cough. Silas went to school or college at Humbolt that winter and corresponded with Mary Inman; I was 18 that Feb. and I taught the home school in the Spring or Summer. Well I went with Will and then again I didn't, the 4th of July came again and I promised to go with him, and Silas would have Mary; we went together to Clarion, and Will acted strange, not like his usual self, so I just ignored him and went with girls I knew; Charlie Peterson was there and wanted to take me home, but I said no, as I thought I would save Will's face but in the afternoon Silas got us together and we all went riding together. When we got started for home, Will got into the back of the wagon and sulked, and going from their house I asked what had got into him, and would you believe it, his mother had wanted him to stay from me because I would not go steady; well I was surprised and got mad and told him that I would never go with him again and I didn't.

"That Fall I went to Webster City again and was intending to go to school there all winter, but King at Wall Lake wanted to know if I would teach their school, so I went to Clarion to the teachers meeting and was examined again. So that winter I was out there, none but the King children, and it was one of the worst winters I have ever seen unless it was the winter two years ago. There was snow, snow and more snow, a blizzard so often and so cold all the potatoes froze and they put the third child to sleep with us and I went to Birdsels and begged them to let me stay with them, how the old gentleman laughed when I told him how many slept in our bed; so I was there a few weeks, while with them I had a mile of snow to wade and the grass had not been burned off, and there was only the track I made, then a half-mile across the lake (or else it was half-mile of snow drift and a mile of ice) anyway one day, that had been beautiful up until about noon, begin to look like a blizzard coming up, they came after the children but I wouldn't go with them; cleaned up the room and brought in the wood for I built my own fires, and then started for the lake thinking I would follow my tracks, and there was a tree right at the lake where I went down to the ice, and as I raised up to look, for it was blowing terrible, there right before my eyes was a house--my heart went to my mouth it seemed for there was only two houses a mile each side of the school house and then miles and miles without a house; well it was the school house and I had turned around in my tracks but I did not dare to stay there so turned around again, noted the direction of the wind, and as I could still follow my tracks made the lake and let the wind carry me to the south enough so I could make sure of striking south of the house; think of me out on that lake, well I made the opposite shore or side in a short time and then worked up against the wind, couldn't miss it for the tall trees and so was safe once more inside. Found they were afraid for their father, mother and little boy, because it was such a pretty day they had gone on a picnic; they were expecting them home and they finally came, but Mr. Birdsel said "that mother and I had made up our minds we would have to get under the wagon box, but we let the horses have their heads and they brought us home". It was five miles to the nearest house East, a mile of board fence on each side and then prairie until you came to the house. Well that mile of board fence was filled to the top with snow and when Uncle came after me he had to wade it, and I did too when I went back with him. He said it was the last and I was willing and gave up the school for a month. I had a sick spell just from the strain of wading that snow and had a $40.00 doctor bill to pay. I had a small pony that I had from Uncle for some money loaned him, not that much money, but Uncle sold it to the doctor for that much, said it was just right for his little boy. Aunt thought we had made a good bargain. Well I taught the home school that spring and Silas came to see me. I was 19 that winter. After I came home we had another big blizzard; it was school director meeting again and a lovely day; Aunt went down to Uncle

George's I think one of your father's sisters was working there then. Think it was Maggie Wallace, anyway she was not married then. Uncle had a large family on his hands, he could have had Mrs. Crowel but that meant two more children; he wanted a young woman, but they fought shy; he asked me once if I did not think it was better for a young woman to go into a home already made than to marry someone who had nothing. I told him "no" especially when they had to take a family like he had. I did not take that as asking me to marry him but Alma said he asked her and Aunt Isabell was wrought up over it. Anyway he had to hire Mrs. Crowel again as Maggie gave out, then another girl before Mrs. Crowel, Silas run with her to singing school and then they quit, I asked him what was the trouble and he said he caught her in a lie. Why he and Mary quit I don't know, anyway I began to wonder if he was coming just to see me. Now back to the blizzard, Julian was back from California and staying with us. It was a good thing the folks did not try to come home that night, as we couldn't even see the barn, the trees were not very large that were on the East side of the road. Julian came and told me I would have to help with the stock, to get them in the shed as the windbreak did not go around the shed and the door was at the westsouthwest corner. We had to fight to get them in and Julian said you can't find the first tree without going out of sight of the shed, and so he had to help me find it. I was scared all the time for fear one of the children might go out of the house. The next day it had cleared up some and the folks came home, Silas was with them. From that time on he came to see me, Ceaphus was going with Emma Richards. They quit for awhile as she wanted him to give up tobacco, he tried and then began again, he did better than P. W. he told her he couldn't quit. I remember now how you used to go to school with me that spring, a fat little thing as good as could be 5 years old, slept part of the time and I used to hustle to get the work done up before going to school, would pull John out of bed and lie him on the floor, make his bed, tell him not to dare get in again. He always was a sleepy head. We had two rooms upstairs and Uncle lathed them in the winter after the leanto was put on. Well Silas and I decided we would get married. Uncle and Aunt were against it as we were cousins. Uncle George had married Mrs. Crowel and they were going to Virginia to a warmer climate and cheaper land. He wanted Silas and me to go with them but I said we would have nothing and would have to live with them. They said he could go and when he had a home for me I could come but Silas wouldn't do that, so Uncle blamed Aunt Cynthia and me for Silas not going and Ceaphus wouldn't go if Silas didn't. Silas had a yoke of oxen and had worked some land that had wheat on it. Uncle George had given him things that he got scarcely no bid on at the sale. To go down there he put a mortgage on the eighty with the house on and the 160 in the hills, which we didn't find out about until we were married.

"Julian took Frank with him and went back to California, Silas and I were married at home, Ceaphus and Emma standing up with us. Uncle Arnold had rented his farm to us, we to have the front of the house to live in, they put paper board on the walls and what our share of rent was, I don't remember or why Uncle did it. We had cows and everything, we had a span of horses and used one of his. Think Uncle thought Silas would have to hire by the day if he didn't. They had their garden, cows, chickens, and hogs anyway. I did the chores mostly for us, we were up early and Silas worked early and late. I did the dragging of the grain, rode the corn cultivator and I can see now Silas planting corn with two hand planters, though that was the last as the next year he bought the first corn planter I had ever seen. We had rather a thin crop that year, not enough rain. Uncle was ready to work the farm himself the next year. Grandfather wrote Uncle to give me a cow and a calf for him and Uncle gave another besides that for some money he had of mine, so we had quite a few cows to start with. Uncle was school director and I had my certificate so I could have taught that winter but Silas did not want me to. In the spring I had enough else to do, quilted and made comforters, sewed carpet rags and we did plenty of running around, it was the last playtime we had, Silas was twenty-one in January and I twenty in February. We ran to everything with Will and Mary Inman, we four together. Along in the Fall there was a trip to the lake, a picnic and Silas said he couldn't go as they were haying but would come later, so I went with Will and Mary. I went out on the lake with Frank Sheldon, Albert Sheldon was out in a boat alone and Frank had to row the two boats to shore and I held the rope of Albert's boat until we finally got to land. The crowd had made up to go to Rice's for a party. Will was there but Silas had not come and when we got to Rice's I started to walk home but Will insisted he take me home and when we got there Mrs. Boyington, his Aunt, was there and she said "you wouldn't go with him when you were single and now you begin to go with him". They never could say that again. We had to rent another farm and move in the fall, so rented one from an old gentleman, his daughter was Mrs. Chester Boyington. When I taught school near there we had been good friends, but now she said she wouldn't move. Her folks had the lean-to on the house and they the upright, it only had bats over the cracks, a room below and one above. Oh, it was dirty. Well we finally went down to see her, we wanted to move before it got so cold on account of the stock and plowing, she was pretty cool but she finally thawed out and we fixed it up, and as it was better for both of us to get settled before snow flew, so we bought wall paper and put it on over those dirty boards and tried to clean it up. We were using the old drum stove at home, now we had a new stove, wasn't I proud, our table and chairs and about everything we had was bought with my money from teaching, even a bureau which I sold to your mother later on, but the stove, we bought it and we were very happy there and cozy too but by spring other arrangements were made; Ceaphus was alone in his father's house, and the farms would have to go for the mortgage, but could stay and farm them and have what we could make, so we moved over in that big mousey, fly-dirty house and I had to clean it up, and that was no fun, besides another to cook for, and I was carrying my first baby which was born in May. Well the mice were what drove me crazy, finally got them poisoned off. We lived mostly on cornbread that year, we had too much rain at harvest time and we had to eat from our own wheat, get the flour from the mill, and I couldn't make good bread; wheat was $2.00 a bushel so we sold it and ate johnniecake; baby came and she cried a good deal and I had trouble with my breasts, but lived thru it all.

"Got a letter from father Crabtree and they were coming back next year sometime. Charlie had come back, we had got together almost enough money to get him home but he bummed the balance of the way. That makes me think of the time Frank came back from California he had beat his way, lousey and ragged, so we cleaned him up and sent him back to Illinois, that was the summer I was at Uncles. Julian said he could do nothing with him, and made him lose his job where he was working.

"Down in Virginia, Father Crabtree had lost their baby. Charlie had married a Southern girl, none of them knew anything about the conveniences up north, and a continued diet of corn pone, well they couldn't stand it, that was what used father Crabtree up, he just could not stand it. We had meat, butter, milk and eggs and vegetables with our cornbread. Well Charlie gave his wife some of the money he had earned and told her he would send money for her to come up and she told him she would rather have her right hand cut off than come up there, he did not believe her and said he would not live down there. Well he worked out and made his home with us and when he had the money, came to me and wanted to know what to do, should he send her a ticket, she had a baby by that time, so I told him if she would not really come up and he wouldn't go down, I thought the better way, as she had the baby, was to send her the money, as the ticket would do her no good and the money would, so he bought material for her and the baby, some clothes and sent all to her, he never heard from her. Well father Crabtree wrote he would die if he had to stay there, I think their 2nd girl was born there. At that time the South was rabid for presidential election was on, they were ordered not to vote. Some of Mrs. C. relations went down and they came back. Well the three boys with Tom Smith sent money and got them back in the fall.

"In the meantime Uncle Arnold came to us and asked for us to come back on his farm as he wanted to go in with Ceilly to Center Point, as it happened, it was the worst thing he ever did, he sold most of the stock but not all the grain. Then they lost those three dear little boys, for if they had been at home no doubt it would never have happened, as the water was contaminated. We moved back on the farm and our baby was gone, and I was left broken hearted. In the meantime father Crabtrees were back, Ceaphus moved into the back rooms upstairs and we spent the winter in our home mourning. I just could not be comforted.

"Well our baby died and I could not be reconciled. Silas told me I should not feel like I did, but I couldn't get over it until I had a greater loss. Oh, Silas was the best man and I did love him so. Never a cross word from him, and he was a Christian if ever there was one, so patient and kind. I was not always that way, too much fire about me in those days and long afterwards. That summer I was not much help outside as in August Silas was born and before I could get around we had threshers. Clara Hammond worked for me when both babies were born. Shortly afterwards your father and Ben Ceily came one day, they were doing silvering of knives and forks. They did mine. Then was when Uncle told Silas that he had told Ben that the grain all belonged to him (Uncle) and that was what Ciely was after, for he had got Uncle caught by having him sign several notes with him. Shortly after Uncle broke with him and came back to us. Aunt was back at grandfathers with you children and Uncle worked for us and after awhile we moved into the front rooms and Aunt and the children moved back home again, she looked about ready to drop. Well we had to look for another place to farm. We already had bought the 40 acres across from Trowbridges, it was a tax title. We paid $40.00 for it, perhaps not that much, am not sure as Silas had broken a lot on it and he was expecting to get the front 40 for $250.00 and would have had it if he had lived, and we had a farm to work for three years only a short distance from father Crabtree's house. He had settled that about the 40 that day he came home sick, but he never went out again, only was carried out. Nothing had been signed. Well I was glad to have the folks with me and the D's too and also the Crabtrees came and did what they could. Silas called me and wanted to see his boy and told me to bring him up to meet him in heaven and for me not to be so rebellious, God knew best, he died of typhoid, saying "I can see my darling and her hair shines just like gold". Well losing my baby was nothing to losing him, it all comes back to me now but I had my boy to live for and he was not well. Guess I cried too much and he slept little at night and neither did I, and no chance to rest in the daytime. Aunt was not well, there was work to do and we were all together. At last we had the doctor for the baby and he told me if I wanted to keep my baby I would have to make a change. The only thing to do was to write to grandfather and ask if I could go there and stay with them. They did not answer. Guess they were not anxious for me to come, as it had not been long since Aunt and all of you were there. I sold off most of the stuff we had but did not get much for it and about everything was sold on time. Uncle kept the cows and the other things on time. We fed the hogs thru the winter, they ate the corn and I paid for their being taken care of; I got $2.50 a hundred, I paid for hauling them off and I saw no money. It was a help to Uncle coming back on the farm, with nothing but his share of the grain, but I couldn't go without money, I had to have money.

"It came holiday time, Will Inman, Charlie Richards and Mary Inman were married, don't remember who Will married, I was depressed, went over and talked with Mary and Charlie. They came and looked at my household stuff and I practically gave them away all but my bureau and bedding and small things which I packed in a box and I never got all of them for the children went thru it and many things were not there when it was sent to me later on. Aunt gave me $5.00 for my bureau. I took the few dishes with me in a small trunk and a box. Well they bought my household goods practically all new for something like $15.00 or $20.00 cash, it was to be paid in a month and within the month or when it was due Aunt took me down to Alden where they lived. I was already to get on the train but did not have the money and I was there to stay until I got it. Well guess they did not want to keep me and the baby, that cried about all night and he had good lungs so Charlie must have borrowed it, anyway did not get it all, but Mary raised potatoes the next year for it was now February. They put me on the train for Maquoketa, Iowa, where father lived and that was the last I saw of our folks for a long time.

"Father Crabtree was going to Wisconsin to take up a farm there, had wanted Silas to say he would go with him, but I opposed that and now I was alone with my son so of course wouldn't go to that family and work for them. On the train that night I had my hands full to keep Silas from crying all the time, a night and a day before we reached mothers. I was dead tired and father said the first thing that night "that child has to have some cows milk". (Pariegoric was what father said. He was raised on it and it did quiet the child during the night). I was brought up on it, well it helped. I was with them a week or more and then went on to Roscoe where Aunt Ellen and grandma Dobson were, where I left later to go to live with Aunt. Well, they put me to bed and took care of the baby, only brought him to me to nurse, and they doctored me until he and myself were much better again.

"Grandfather had died and she was nearly ninety but I was still her baby and was to have her bed and bedding when she passed on. I never saw her again, but a couple of years after Newt and I went back and visited and brought it home with us as Aunt wanted us to have it. Uncle David was living at Rockford then and their 7th son, a blue eyed baby was born. I was there only a short time but Aunt Anna bought material for a black dress and her sister-in-law made it for me. I had one dress, it was red, dyed black by our neighbor Mrs. Fuller that lived just beyond Hoags. It was very nice of them as it looked much nicer than the one I had. We were supposed to wear black in those days. Aunt's baby cried most all the time. Uncle David went with me to grandfathers and of course they did not throw me out. When Silas got down out of my lap he was so much better and grandmother wanted to take care of him more than he wanted her to. I was free to work and was feeling better, so all summer I cleaned the house, it needed it badly and I got to looking so I wasn't ashamed to have those I was acquainted with come in. I kept getting a little money from Iowa and had to have something to help live on. Grandma paid for having the rooms kalsomined they were filthy; grandfather had spit on the wall across from his bed. The flour barrel was upstairs and when they wanted flour they went up there and it was scattered all down the stairs and there was a good pantry, then they had a kitchen outside the door and we got the stove moved out there and as we had the walls cleaned, began on the pantry. We made our own bread those days and I was tired going upstairs for flour and poor half blind grandma did well to get the meals. Well after the pantry was clean I went upstairs and brought the flour barrel down, put it in the pantry with the bread board over it. I was much pleased with the looks of it and went to our outdoor kitchen. When I came back in again after taking something into the pantry was surprised to find the flour barrel gone. I turned and looked at grandma in astonishment and she said "it was your grandfather". Well I went upstairs brought it down and put it in the pantry with the bread board over it. Shortly after he came in and went and opened the door, then turned and looked at me, his eyes bulging out, but before he could say anything I bulged my eyes out and said "If you think I am going to run up and down stairs for every bit of flour I use, your're badly mistaken". He swung around and out the door he went. That was the last of that. Only grandmother said, "You're just like your grandfather". We had one cow and made butter and when we had a twenty pound tub we were going to sell it for some things we needed, but grandfather sold it and we did not see the money, but he bought the bare necessary things. If I bought things grandma would say "Yes, he can eat them". We had eggs and the milk but I saw that I would have to do something, I could not stay though they needed me." Continued under 09-02484.

Letters from Dora Louise Dobson Sheldon to Frances A. Wallace DeFrance, Jan. 21, 1938:

"Was glad to get your letter and am glad you had such a nice holiday time, with presents and could enjoy. Have had one letter from Cora and she had the best kind of time on their trip and are back home and settled down to the same old routine; I have to lie down and relax when I nap. When I look into the glass I see Aunt Cynthia sometimes. Yes, Fred looks natural was sorry we missed seeing each other. Glad he got a good wife, that will take good care of him. When he dies their house will go to others. It is a duplex and rents one side. Fred's sister left it to her husband's relatives when Fred dies.

"It is warm today (Sat.), have been cutting out wool blocks, guess I have a winters job. Have one comfort top pieced and am now working on two more. Am glad you heard from so many friends; I do so enjoy the letters I get and enjoyed Yost's letter so much and thank you for sending me the letters and pictures----

"Oh, I have been living over old times, way back when I was twelve, that winter after coming to Aunts in October. That Picture is the Otto Reeds place; we went East across that little pasture, and our house, a one-story, stood right near the fence; only two rooms, one had two beds in it, there was a curtain around one, Fred & I slept in it, my but he yelled when I would put my cold feet against him. Otis was just old enough to walk and bound to play about the stove, and he got so many burns.

"When I came to live with them, grandfather said he would make it up to them if they cared for me. Uncle was willing but he did not want Fred and at last got Aunt to consent to let him take Fred back to Uncle Jonas then Aunt went to bed, was out of her head, because she wasn't keeping her promise to Aunt Sarah, and she got no better until Uncle went to Uncle Jonas and begged to have Fred back, but the girls wanted to keep him as they were keeping house for their father.

"I went to school a couple of months that winter, and Uncle traded off the 80 for a 160 acres in Iowa, that Uncle George wrote was all right. Uncle thought the 80 acre farm was too small, but uncle was not a farmer to make money, he was not brought up to do chores too many older sisters, and then he worked with the team on the farm, he liked that part, and then in the army with a horse for 4 years; so when he came back home all he knew was to farm. During the war mother and Aunt helped grandfather out of doors on the farm. I remember when word came that Uncle David was wounded, they were cutting grain, grandfather quit and went after Uncle David and the two women went on with the harvest. When he could he brought Uncle David back with him. Then when he was rested up, he gave Uncle David 80 right off his own farm, and Uncle went on it and made money; up early in the morning and out to work with the cattle and hogs. Then grandfather gave Aunt this 80 after Uncle was back awhile. They lived at grandfathers. We had moved down into the red house when Uncle David came back, and he married Aunt Anna, cousin of mine, and they lived in with grandfathers until house was built, before your father came back. That winter Uncle Ben went off to work and Aunt Mary, Eugene and Rosie lived with us in the red house, one room, pantry & bedrooms and two rooms upstairs, a mark was run the length of the floor and we children had to stay on our own side of the house. That winter our potatoes froze and we lived mostly on beans and meal, we also had milk and molasses.

"In the spring Uncle Ben came back and grandfather helped him buy the 80 where Rose is now and put up the two room ell. After Uncle had traded the land, father Wallace wanted him to come onto the old farm and work it, keeping John and Joe on it to help him; Joe was about 17 I should think and John younger. Father Wallace wanted to marry an old maid school teacher, but could keep only Ella, who was a year younger or maybe my age. I went to school two more months before we moved. We moved over to father Wallace's place and the two boys and I were enemies all right. Think Uncle worked the old 80 anyway, pastured the cows and young stock there, Fred and I had to drive them over and bring them back, we rode Uncle's horse he bought when he came out of the war. We had the saddle on, me in it and Fred up behind me and every time the horse trotted, he cried, guess he did the walking coming back. Our John was born soon after we were there and after the woman, who helped, had left, I was all the help Aunt had, there was quite a family, 8 of us, and there was a good many cows to milk; I remember we had the jars out on the table to skim and Otis pulled down on the leaf, and it all went over on top of him. We had an old ram to do the churning on a tread mill, always had to hunt him up, finally he climbed to the top of the straw stable, jumped off and broke his back, did it on purpose so he wouldn't have to churn, we had to use the dash ourselves then.

"John got the scald-head terrible and I was the baby-tender. There was no school for me, it was two miles or more away, too much to do, and did not go in the winter. That winter I was 13 years old and Uncle and Aunt went often in the evenings; I was always with the children at home, sometimes I went to grandmother's and Uncle David's.

"We used candles, and they were afraid to trust me with the lamp, but one night we were just beginning to use it and found we were out of oil, and also candles; they went to town after some, so I made a light out of a saucer of melted tallow with a button tied in a small rag, I lit the short end but it flared so, I did not like it, as when it flared it hurt my eyes. I never had made candles but I got the moulds, melted the tallow, strung the moulds with the wicks and had them all finished and put them out to cool. It was winter time, so in a little while when I went to look for them they were gone; some days later found them all chewed; the dog had carried them off.

"In the Spring Uncle said he was going to Iowa but Aunt hated so to leave grandfather and mother, that they bought Mr. Currier's farm, south of Lodi and we moved there. I did not go to school perhaps there wasn't any; anyway in the Fall a woman taught a two months school and was paid by parents, there were some 7 or 8 girls that went again in the winter and the next Spring. I was 14 then. We had a small house all on the ground but I slept up stairs on the floor, just a cubby hole with one window. There was a bed-room, off the living room and one off from the kitchen that had two beds, where the hired man slept, also Fred, and either Joe or my brother was there off and on. Once at night when I was alone Joe came and when I wanted to know who it was, he said in a changed voice "Pat", a drunken man that lived near; I was scared and wouldn't open the door, and then he began to laugh and I knew who it was.

"That spring our sheep began to die. Oh a lot died and when they had laid awhile, Aunt and I would begin to pull their wool; I did not like the job as they smelled, and then there was the ticks, but we needed wool, anyway Aunt thought so. She did the most of it and then they took it to Geneva and it was made into rolls, then we began to spin. Aunt promised me two blankets if I would spin enough; well I liked to spin, it was music to me to hear the wheel hum, we worked every moment we could spare.

"Well I don't know much about it but Uncle did not make a success, could not make the payments, don't know how much he paid down but he couldn't keep it and preparations were made to go to Iowa in August. You were born in June, we had two covered wagons; our furniture in them, which wasn't much; farm machinery was shipped with two teams and some young stock following behind. Oh yes, I had just got over the mumps. Julian, my brother went along to drive one of the teams. It took some time to drive, some of the rivers we forded but we were ferried across the Mississippi. We stopped at last at Uncle William's and I was there a week or more with Alma and the other girls; Uncle had 4 sisters near, and one at Independence. The most I can remember about that place was that Fred had the mumps, and exposed them all at that place. Then too Uncle found one of the legs was broken off the table and I told him I did it getting in and out of the opening in back; when the wagon was going along, I would take hold of it to pull myself over the feed box. Uncle made me get in the wagon with him and would not let me sit on the seat with him, but had to stay back under the cover, a punishment for me all right, but it did not take so long to get to Wright County and Uncle George's. Your father got the mumps, took him a long time to get over them. When he did get all right, the land wasn't just right and he wouldn't build on it, so there we were stranded. I don't know if he or Uncle George built that leanto onto their house. Fred slept with the boys and I with Mima on the floor in the hall that winter, the rest of the children was with Uncle and Aunt in the lean-to. We had our stove, table and chairs in there besides, everyone was crowded. The large room upstairs was used as a school room and the teacher was boarding there; can't for the life of me think where she slept. Only Hoags 3 of them came, and I was 15 that winter, just a kid starting to grow taller. I was growing and did not have a decent dress to my back; Mima had a good dress that she had not had long, but she had grown larger and it was pulling, so Aunt had some material for a dress and gave it in exchange for Mima's dress, and with a little fixing I could wear it; I loved it as it was the prettiest dress I had ever had.

"Aunt Jane had a large family, all together there sure was a swarm of us. Uncle Silas and Ceaphus trapped muskrats and minks, there were many of them around there.

"At last Spring came and we did not have much to buy groceries with. So that wool we had with us in yarn balls and a good many yards of homespun, which was for blankets, we began to knit stockings, oh I had knitted many stockings for myself and the children, learned when I was 11, and we only had what we knit. Well I got so I could knit a sock a day, reach to the men's knees, and we got 25¢ a pair in trade in groceries; now I was a busy girl for awhile.

"Guess I have written enough, as I am tired now, but if you want more, say so and I will write some more next time."

Jan. 31, 1938

"Well we are having some cold weather again. This is the twins birthday, 17 years; they have some girls in this afternoon and their sister and her three boys came in last night from Mankato, Minn. Don went back today and they will be with us for a week or more, those boys will be lively company. It is still cold and growing colder. We have a stoker on our furnace and a great improvement on keeping a steady heat with less coal.

"I was thinking so much this past week about the year I was 15 and our 1st winter in Iowa; we were living just 50 miles from Ft. Dodge. What changes time brings to one. Mrs. Wall was our school teacher. Tillie Wall taught the Sheldon school and boarded at Rice's. It was the last day of her school and Aunt Jane was taking her, Mrs. Wall, Mima and myself over to eat dinner at Rice's, it was a surprise for me as before dinner Tillie and Mr. Stewart, who was there, stood up together and were married. After dinner we went to the school and the children were so disappointed as they hoped she was going to be married at the school house. I remember the last time we met was in Washington when visiting Mima. I visited Mrs. Stewart and she brought out her box of photos and what a good time we had visiting.

"At 15 I was short and not very plump, not like you always were, nor like Ella Wallace she was a lot larger than me. I remember Uncle Arnold saying about a stocking Ella was knitting "it was as large around as the stove pipe and almost as black". We always had white yarn unless we colored it at home; Aunt colored our yarn for everyday wear with Aneline Dyes, or a blue dye she made out of indigo and chamber lye. All the Wallace girls were large.

"I remember before we left for Iowa, we all went to visit your Aunt Hettie in Chicago and we had chicken for dinner, I was 14 then and I thought I could dress and cook it all right, but after we had about finished eating it, found the crop was left in; there was nothing in the crop was the reason I had overlooked it, but your father went outside and threw up his dinner.

"Once we stayed all night with Ella but her father wouldn't let us giggle, he was the sourest old man; I never remember seeing him smile, Grandpa Fillmore was stern but not sour. The remembrance I have of my grandpa Dobson, was always so happy, I was his baby tagging at his heels and knew him when at Aunt Ann's before coming to live with Aunt Cynthia, but expect in those days it was hard to raise a large family of children, and especially right after the war.

"When we immigrated to Iowa that spring Aunt wrote to grandfather of our situation and as early as they could, they drove out in an open top buggy and a team of young horses. Grandmother came along. The settlers heard that some one was talking about buying the "Lone Tree Farm" so they cut the tree down and hauled it away. It was a shame as it was the only tree for miles and such a large one. Grandfather bought the farm, built a 16 x 22 or 14 x 16, I can't remember just the size; two rooms, one down and one upstairs, no door between, boards up and down, battons over the cracks and we moved in. Built a shed for the horses and cows, then the folks went back to Illinois, leaving buggy and horses with Uncle. In the meantime Uncle George let Uncle put in a few acres of corn on a piece of ground near their home, but not the land they had broken. Then East of our land was a piece of ground that Uncle planted to oats. Fred and I almost run our legs off to keep the birds from eating the grain before he could drag it in; then Uncle George and A. B. rented a piece of ground where they sowed wheat. When the house was so we could move in, Uncle began to break the ground, and about the first thing, I dropped sod corn for Uncle, some of the corn was dropped and the furrow was turned over it, so it would come to the edge and then again he chopped a hole and I dropped the corn in; then we set out and pushed willows into the ground for a wind break and planted other trees thick three or four rows.

"Our stock run everywhere they pleased, as did everyones stock, each settler had to do his own herding. We had a small horse that I could jump onto bareback and chase them. I did not go to school that Spring, just run bare headed, not bare footed, afraid of snakes, and Oh how I chewed gum, the wild gum on the flowers. Oh don't you think that Aunt wasn't working with 8 to cook for and trying to make that house into a home; no money to speak of but I never saw the time when I did not have enough to eat, not much of a variety sometimes; one thing I hated, though was glad to eat it, and it was the smell I guess, it was salt-rising bread, but we had lots of bisquits, pancakes, mush, oats, cornmeal, beans, and potatoes, nobody could starve on those things, and we had plenty of pork, milk and molasses. You know in those days they bought the coffee green and roasted it then ground it in a coffee mill fresh each time; Aunt used an extract she put a little in each time too. We got the nicest choke-cherries next to Dry Lake, and we had crab apples, they are fine cooked with molasses on them, and plums too, don't remember if we had sugar, I know the second year I was married, we only had a dollars worth. Oh we had eggs in the summer time, not many vegetables that first summer.

"When fall came I husked the corn near Uncle George's, threw it in piles on the ground. Uncle was plowing, sometimes he couldn't come and pick up the corn at night and would go home at night on foot, the three miles. Frost's the only house, and it was so scary; I remember one thing that happened at noon; I went to Uncle's house to eat dinner, Ceaphus let the old ram out when he saw me coming and it bunted me down, then it stood quiet until I stood up, then it would knock me down again. I cried and cried, at last Aunt made him come and take care of it, after that I watched out for him.

"Winter came and there we were perched on top of the hill just a board between us and the cold, a stove with just a small fire-place, a drum on the back to do the baking in and no door to keep the heat from going upstairs. Aunt made me a dress out of the material wove for blankets, and colored red, it was warm. For my head I had a two yard nubia or what I saved from a calf that was eating it while out on the line. I pulled most of it out of his mouth. We had many wild blizzards but in those days the only thing I minded most was walking thru the snow to school. My feet would about freeze, I would hurry or run and Fred could not go as fast as I could and I could not wait for him so he stayed at home, I went to school all that winter.

"Oh yes, I did go with the young folks but not with the boys alone, Uncle wouldn't let me, said to wait until I was sixteen. There was a singing school and spelling school and parties I remember well. There was going to be a donation at the preachers at Otisville and Frank Sheldon asked me to go with him (of course they knew I couldn't go until I was sixteen.) Well he came after me that night in a cutter instead of a load and Uncle said I couldn't go, about then in came Uncle George's family for it was my birthday (in the evening). Of course Uncle went with the men to put the team up and Frank came in and said Mr. Wallace said I could go. So we were gone before the men got back to the house; Frank had told a lie but had saved his face with the young people that had gone on in the sled. It was dangerous going off alone, no fences for a long ways and not knowing if a wind storm would cover the track, anyway it was some time before I went alone with anyone, but that winter there was a party at Sheldon's and I went with a fellow from near Boyington's place, he afterwards married the Hammonds cousin; anyway Uncle said I should come home at ten o'clock. Well he would not bring me home then, so Will Inman and Frank Sheldon drew straws, Frank took me home and I was in bad with Uncle again. There was lots more fun going with a crowd; one time when we went in a crowd Frank was there alone in his cutter at the party and two of us girls was going to let him take us home, it made the boys in the big sled mad and they declared they would run over us. The race was from Inmans house to ours and I expected every minute that something would happen to the home-made cutter and they would be on top of us, we begged Frank to turn out and stop but he wouldn't and it was a long time before I went with him again. I used to be afraid when we went in two sled loads, someone of the boys wouldn't get the girl he wanted and then the race was on, but that was to pass, that wasn't so bad if we tipped over but we never did.

"That summer Aunt Jane died when her baby was born and also that same summer Uncle George bought a Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine and they were scared to have me run it, so Uncle bought a Singer Machine and we needed it badly, there were so many and Aunt had to do all the sewing. There were eight of us and no buying things already made; Aunt cut out and I ran the machine. We made shirts, overalls, even coats and pants for the boys, we got along fine. Mima had her hands full with the family, Uncle and hired help, she was to be married Thanksgiving time and she was making her clothes, of course I was in on the secret and saw her things.

"Uncle Arnold traded off the land he wouldn't go on, for an old threshing machine the worst thing that could have happened, he found it out too late, he hired his brother Joe and Jerome Crabtree to help him, that left Aunt and I to do the chores, Fred would help. No plowing was done and corn was picked so late he had hard work to get his pay, and trouble with the machine, then too one of the horses Grandpa left died. When they threshed at Uncle George's, Joe heard something about Mima getting married so with that and guessing a lot he made out he knew all about it and of course Mima thought I had told him; now I did not know just the exact day and she was married there at home and we were not invited. I told her when she said why she had not invited me, I told her I was not guilty and that as long as I lived she would never be invited to my wedding. Expect she didn't care then, it was a long time before we made up and when Silas and I were to be married said she would like to be invited to her brother's wedding. That was when I was still sixteen, and that year the Richards moved into the neighborhood and such a time as I had getting acquainted with Emma, but she could talk when once we were acquainted.

"That spring protracted meetings were held in the school house near Boyingtons and a good many of us decided to serve Christ our Savior; Tom Smith, Silas, Ceaphus, Charlie Crabtree and myself and a good many more were baptized in Wall Lake. On the 4th of July we were to have a picnic dinner at Boyington's grove, we all went in the big wagon from home; when we got there Tom and Mima, Silas, & Ceaphus had it made up to go to Alden for the rest of the day and the fire works. Tom's lumber wagon had one of those spring seats up in the air, easy riding, but the rest of us had a board (with a quilt on to soften) across the wagon. Mary Richards was with Silas, I with Ceaphus (when I did not have other company the cousins came in handy) it was Will Inman that I went with the most often, except when I didn't get provoked at him; oh, Severe was the name of this fellow that Jean Howard married and it was his brother I went to the party at Sheldon's with.

"I went to school two months that spring. Aunt Cynthia went to visit her father and mother and I kept house. She was not gone long and it was that Fall or in the Spring that I sold my hair and bought a hat with the money and went to the circus (with Will P. and his father and mother at Webster City) for the first time.

"That winter I was 17, Charlie Richards and his brother James came from England; I went with him a few times and one evening he stayed until after midnight. Frank Sheldon was the one that wanted to sit up with me, but I disappeared and left him.

"That Fall when Uncle quit threshing Joe and Jerome stayed on, maybe they had to stay somewhere, but my troubles had already started with Joe, as he was making his home with us. Oh he did so many mean things for fun and I was easily teased. I did not have many trinkets, except a broach that Aunt gave me that was hers and a pen knife that disappeared from my stand, never to see it again; I laid it on him.

"Making the fire in the morning was my job at Uncle George's. Silas used to go in and do it for me. Upon that hill with no windbreak and only boards between us and the cold, with three grown men in the house, and one only 6 feet from the stove. I rebelled, then Uncle made Fred do it, but I really did it, I would get down and Fred would be crying and all bunched up and no fire; he seemed so dumb those days, he was 10, but anyway it was too much for him, it was so cold it was all I could do to get it going and the room warm. The boys did cut the wood and do the chores. I was in school that winter bound to teach the next spring. Uncle and the boys laughed and said that it wasn't likely I would do any such thing, so I worked all the harder and Aunt said 'do not mind what they say'.

"Mrs. Crowley and Uncle George married a little later, she had worked for them and it seems as if she boarded there and they took her back and forth; just can't quite remember. Joe was courting Kate Hoag that winter, he used to clean himself up also his mouth so no smell of tobacco was about him, and then he told her he had quit the weed.

"When school was out Uncle Arnold wouldn't take me to Clarion, so Uncle George came and took me and I passed the examinations and then he took me home with him; he was President of the school board and there was a school without a teacher in the Dave Pepper and Peterson's Districts and he took me to the director; we got the school, made out everything and in two weeks school began and he took me home. It might have been more than two weeks, anyway Uncle Arnold said I wouldn't go and if I did I couldn't come back, Aunt Cynthia was heard from then. In one way, he couldn't be blamed as I was needed at home the worst way, but all the same he had been driving me to it in more ways than one. I had only that wool dress to wear, and I needed at least one decent dress to go into the school room. I braided men's hats, one a day and Aunt sewed two a day that was the way I bought the few things I needed. It must have been more than two weeks for I had to make my clothes and the day before school started, the twins were born, Elroy and Elwood, he hired a woman to help. Well from that time on Uncle used me as if I was a woman.

"Will write more some other time. Have the reliving of those old days interested you?

Love, Dora.

Letter written by Erma Byington to her cousin --

"Dear cousin Elva: I surely enjoyed your letter and wish we could see each other and visit. I can see you have had a busy life raising ten children. I had eight children. We lived on a farm almost all the time but sold out and came to Oregon in 1927. My mother needed someone to take care of her and my sister Fannie was an invalid from rheumatism. My husband died in 1930 so I had to get along the best I could. Three boys were still in school and needed a father but they were good to listen to me and God gave me the strength to do my work and help mother, also Fannie. I never was very big. I weighed 95 lbs when I was married and my husband weighed 220. I have always been quite well and have worked out quite a bit since the war. My husband had $3000.00 life insurance so that helped me until the last boy was through school. I had another sorrow 6 mos. after my husband died. It nearly killed me but God helped me to see it was for the best. He got hurt and had to have his spleen taken out so he never was well again. I had six boys and all are large like their father. The two girls are not so tall but get heavy if they aren't careful. I weigh 115 now. I have trouble with my hip and have treatments for it. My oldest son lives near Seattle. He doesn't have any children, his name is Arnold after my father.

"The second son is William Wallace Byington. He worked his way through college and is a mining engineer. He has been so good to send money to me after he graduated and went to Juneau, Alaska. The third boy Floyd Byington is the one that passed away, he was 6 ft., 1 in., and weighed 220 lbs. He was a handsome boy with big brown eyes and wavy hair. My oldest daughter, Hazel Margaret married Paul Simpson. They have three sons, 2 are married and each have 2 children. Hazel teaches school. The next girl is Erma Bessie, she married Tobe Robbins and have 2 girls and 1 boy, the oldest girl is married and has 2 little girls. The next son is Kenneth Byington, he is married and has a boy and girl. He worked his way thru college at Oregon State as a chemical engineer. Glenn Lavern Byington is the next son and worked his way thru college. He took education but played football and could be a coach. He is at the head of National Guard in Alaska, they have 3 children.

"Wayne Yost Byington is my youngest, he didn't want to go to college so has worked in plywood mills. He has done so well and has made more than the others. He has 3 children, they live near me about 3 miles and has been such a comfort and help to me. All of my children have helped me so I thank God for all of them.

"Well I must tell you I remember my mother telling about your grandmother and how she helped take care of the babies. She said they could lay them in a cigar box. She loved to talk about all of them and came out to Corvallis, to see Mary Jane in 1911 I think, then came back to Iowa and sold their furniture and moved out.

"My mother had two pair of twins, maybe I told you in my other letter, she had one son a while after her husband went back to the war, then they had 3 children and a pair of twins, one died so they went and stayed at grandma and grandpa's in Maple Park. They came back to Iowa and I was born, then Arthur and Arnie was born 3 mos. after my father died. Arnie also died in infancy. Mother had lots of sorrow, she was always taking other children to raise. You spoke about her going to visit your grandmother and had a nine year old boy with her. He was an adopted son, he was always so good to her when she was old. He never married and comes to see me nearly every summer. I remember mother writing and telling me about your mother and others coming out to visit, I called one of Mary Jane's girls after I got your letter and she is so anxious to hear more about the relation, she said one of her nephews had a picture of the folks that came here. I expect it is the same as you have.

"My nephew, sister Fannie's son (Irvie De France) lives in Salem, we went there just before Easter and I took your letter to read. He was so interested and copied it. I will take this one over when I can so he can read it. He is the one that started the family tree.

"Yes, the Wallaces were English and Scott, the Fillmores were English. Yes they were cousins to the President Fillmore and mother said she used to brag about it.

"My brother Arthur lives at Pasadena. His wife wrote to me after Easter and said he had had 2 slight strokes. I would sure like to go see him this summer.

"We are going to drive up to Wenatchee, Wash. to see my daughter Erma and maybe on our way back we can look up your brother. I could write on and on but must get to work, I will make out an outline of some of the Fillmores."

03 Patricia Nadine, b. July 24, 1905, Dows, Iowa; unm.

Paul David died at Mayville, N. Dak., killed in Hwy. accident; buried in Memorial Cemetery, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Nadine resides at 216 15th St., S.E., Cedar Rapids, Ia. 52403, with her father. She was a successful teacher, lecturer, and author of school text books (retired). She developed a system of teaching phonics, reading and spelling and wrote and published a series of six guide books for teachers and six word study books for pupils entitled Steps to Mastery of Words that were supplemented by The Fillmore, Read More, Spell More, Sound Chart and by recorded lessons that are widely used and have been officially adopted in several states. Her name and achievements are listed in Who's Who of American Women, 1965, 1968 and 1969, also in Who's Who of the Midwest, which lists both men and women.

She retired from teaching to nurse her father in his later years.

Copy of letters written by Floyd D. Fillmore to his cousin:

"Dear Cousin Elva: Your letter addressed to the descendants of David H. Fillmore, Dows, Iowa, has been forwarded to me for reply, my name is Floyd D. Fillmore, and David H. Fillmore, who died in 1915 was my father. My mother, Anna L. Fillmore brought seven Fillmore boys into the world. Three died in infancy, two in early childhood, and one, the only one I knew, lived to be 14 years old when he fell on the ice and broke his neck and died. It seems tragedy has camped on our doorstep all through the years. My only son, Paul D. Fillmore was killed in a highway accident six years ago.

"Now of those original seven Fillmore boys, whose lives were destined to be so short, the most unpromising at birth and during the first year was your humble servant who writes this letter. I was born on a stormy night and my stomach was so upset, I refused my mother's milk and the nurse from two solicitous aunts. I was so coddled and rocked and jiggled around that I became the sea-sickest ever to be found on dryland in Rockford, Ill., where I was born. But in spite of all that coddling, I lived.

"I do not belong to the Presbyterian Church, but I firmly believe in the Presbyterian doctrine of fore-ordination. I have outlived all my people and all my wife's people and almost all my friends and associates of former years. Two weeks ago, I celebrated my 82nd birthday. As far as possible, I keep out of the maddening crowd, I don't hear so well, I don't see so well and I don't walk so well but each day I recognize my obligations to my loved ones, to my community and to my God.

"Now in your letter you inquired about my father's Memoirs. They never materialized in a book. Everybody wanted his book but no one, not even his closest friends and kin people, ever offered to buy a copy. When he found out that his first publication cost would be at least $1000.00, he sidetracked the venture. He was a good business man and a charitable man but he had no ambition to pose as a first cousin to Santa Claus. He was writing this book as a business venture. When he realized that he might be holding the sack with a lot of unsold copies on hand, he turned his energy into other more enjoyable work. Always a pioneer, he went to Panama City in northwest Florida and helped build a town called Lynn Haven. Old soldiers came from all over the North with their new increase in pension to spend their remaining years, and here he died in 1915. I revere his memory, God rest his soul.

"You tell me that you are a grand daughter of Sarahfina Crabtree, that name strikes a tender chord in my heart. She was my father's favorite niece, I have heard him speak of her often. He was very fond of her. If she had not been a niece, who knows if yours and my relationship might have been much closer than that of being a third or fourth cousin. I hope you will pardon the delay in writing this letter. I have done the best I could, for I was deeply touched that you sent me a self addressed envelope. I have never before had that experience. To you and your family of ten, I extend the Greetings of the Christmas Season and may the good Lord keep you always in his Holy care."

"Dear Cousin Elva: I am glad my November letter pleased you, I hope I always please you, but don't count upon it, I do not always please myself. The fact that you wrote the next day, is evidence that to you, letter writing is a delight. It is not so with me, it is a duty to be fulfilled rather than a pleasure to be enjoyed. And yet I do get a great deal of joy in writing to so appreciative a correspondent. I will do my best to answer your letters and your inquiries, but I will not guarantee myself to be either regular or prompt. Your son Kieth is interested in the stock he sprang from. Well one of them was my grandfather, John Fillmore, who was born in New Brunswick in 1798. He was also your grandmother Sarahfina Crabtree's grandfather. Now climb your tree of life one more branch and we come to your mother's mother, then one more branch and we come to my favorite niece, climb again and we come to Kieth, of course I like him for history always has been my hobby.

"There were grants in those days, and this fierce old sea dog I am writing about was none other than Kieth Lohoff's great, great, great grandfather, John Fillmore. I knew him well, I learned to admire him for his sterling qualities even though they inspired in me more fear than love. He started all his sons and sons-in-laws on the road to security. Some of them, I am sorry to record let their patrimony slip out of their hands.

"My grandmother, who was Kieth's great, great, great grandmother was Sarah Reed, whose picture Elva saw and commented on her bonnet, which was neither Quaker nor Dunkard, but was the fashion of the times for genteel old ladies to wear, and grandmother Fillmore was class all right and her brothers, Capt. John Reed and Capt. Otho Reed thought their sister Sarah stepped down a notch when she married him. Perhaps she did, it is a debatable question. He never acquired any titles to his name, but he did acquire some titles to good old Illinois land.

"I well remember the day he died, I was in high school at the time, his last days were with his youngest daughter, my aunt Cynthia, my father took his remains to Maple (Hill) Park, Ill. and laid it beside that of his beloved wife Sarah, and erected a monument to their name. With my family I visited the cemetery some years ago, I felt as if I was standing on holy ground, and when I left I choked up and all I could say was "goodbye Grandpa, goodbye you stern old Pioneer."

"Well, Elva and Oscar and Kieth, that is my December contribution to the Lohoff's entertainment. I will write you another verse in Jan."

"Dear Elva: No doubt by now you have discovered what a poor pen pal I am, it surprises my family to hear that I write at all, for I don't write to any of them, when an emergency arises I phone, and some day I may phone you. But today with brain a little less foggy, and the hand somewhat steady I will write and this time I will tell you about the first child aunt Cynthia took under her wing, and there were many casual residents during her life, but I think this was the most outstanding example of Christian love, for she legally adopted a frightfully smallpoxed and not full witted little boy, named Alfred or as he always would say, 'Fred Reed adopted Wallace'. His mother was one of the Reeds, and you know I have told you that grandmother Fillmore was a Reed. The girl was one of Aunt Cynthia's best friends, I suppose she was a cousin. This girl died with smallpox, I do not know. Smallpox was an awful disease in those days. Both my father and Aunt Cynthia had it in a slight form, and when you had it you were immune to getting it again, and Aunt Cynthia with her Florence Nightingale love for suffering humanity, nursed a great many that were sick, and when this Reed girl died, she gave her baby to Cynthia. I think it is a most unusual thing for an unwed girl to adopt a baby, and for that one act I revere my Aunt Cynthia's name.

"The man she was engaged to was my father's buddy and tentmate, Arnold Wallace. Pa thought a great deal of the Wallace's, especially the four Wallace girls, and he was very sweet on the oldest, Nettie, he called her his girl, just as Cynthia was Arnold's girl, but when the two men went to war, Cynthia said yes to Arnold, but Nettie was non-commital, and when the winter of 1863, the two men came home on a 30 day furlough, my father got the shock of his life, when he got to Chicago, for he found Nettie married to a Great Lakes sea Captain, named Godwin, and Arnold almost fainted when he got home to Lodi and found a baby that was not his in his beloved's lap, but he recovered when he saw what a wonderful thing she had done, and so they were married, and Uncle Arnold went back to Virginia again.

"Now Fred Reed adopted Wallace, was by no means a moron, tho if he were living today he would be classed with that large group which we call 'mentally retarded'. He was slow of speech, slow in accomplishment, slow of wit, but he was good, good, good all the way through, he had no bad habits and was more of a blessing to aunt Cynthia and uncle Arnold than some of their own young. I knew him well. He lived in our home much of three years after he grew up. I was not much attracted to farming, but most of what I knew I learned from him, and during those formative years, he was my closest cousin.

"Well here we come to the end of the road, and to the end of my letter. We have just gone thru a cranberry scare, I think next time I will write about a cranberry scare 140 years ago. It was on grandfather and grandmother Fillmore's wedding day. It might have wiped out the whole Fillmore clan, including Me and You."

INSTRUCTIONS

Two types of numbers will be found in this book. One, the family number, consists of seven digits. An example is 09-00340, where the 09 indicates that the family is of the ninth generation and the 00340 indicates that it is the 340th family of that generation. The second type of number, the number of an individual as a child, consists of nine digits. An example is 09-00340-02, where the 09 indicates that the individual is a child of a ninth generation family, the 00340 indicates that the individual is a child of the 340th family of that generation, and the 02 indicates that the individual is the 2nd child of that family. Birth dates will indicate whether or not the correct sequence of the children is known or was known (no birth date, or dates not in sequence, sequence was probably unknown when listed).

The arrangement of the book is by family numbers. Immediately preceding each family, in the center of the line, will be found the family number corresponding to that family. At the beginning of the paragraph describing a family will be found the number of the head of the family as a child. This enables one to trace a line back to the beginning, that is, back to Palmer.

Under each family those children appearing elsewhere as heads of families will have, following their birthdate, the family number of the family of which they are the head, or, if married to another Tingley descendant, that child may be the spouse in that family if not shown as the head of that family. This enables one to trace the descendants of an individual.

The numbers appearing in the index are family numbers. It will be noted that some of them have a prefix of "S". Such a number following an individual in the index indicates that person is not a Tingley descendant, but is a spouse of a Tingley descendant. Thus HILTZ, Naomi V. S09-00340 was the wife of William Charles Throop, 08-00172-06 when he became head of family 09-00340. She is found in the paragraph just below the family number and before children are listed in the family.

When the number following an individual in the index has no S prefix that number is a family number under which the individual will be listed as a child. Thus THROOP, Fida May 09-00340 is found in the ninth generation, 340th family, and is the second child shown.

To trace one's own line back to the beginning, that is, back to Palmer, one should start with his own name and the number which follows his name, in the index. For example, TINGLEY, Harleigh Van Slyck 09-00076 will be found in 9th generation, 76th family and is the 2nd child. The number after his name here, as a child, tells where he will be found as head of a family, with his wife and the children, in the next generation.

His father, at the beginning of the paragraph for family 09-00076 has a number preceding his name, 08-00041-03. This says that he was the 3rd child in the 41st family of the 8th generation, Edward Harleigh Tingley. By looking up the 41st family of the 8th generation (Volume I) it will be found that Edward is the third child and the number after his name there is 09-00076. Now to trace back farther repeat as before or see instructions on page 517 since you must now follow Vol. I. For finding relationships between individuals see Instructions in Volume I, page 518.

Adopted children and their lines are carried in italics to distinguish them from those of Tingley blood.

When a person was known by his middle name rather than his first name, that name is underlined.
